Officials Organize, Will Seek Laws to Permit Arrest Across Boundaries

A concerted move against crime in the District began to take shape yesterday as a result of disclosures in the Warring income tax conspiracy case.

Major developments were:

A permanent law enforcement body comprising District, Maryland and Virginia officials was formed, with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, as chairman.

Attorney General Murphy, "indignant" at the revelations in the Warring case, began immediately the consideration of a program to raise standards for United States deputy marshals. It appeared likely that he would recommend that deputy marshals be brought under civil service.

Justice Bolitha Laws of the District Court signed five orders to compel as many persons involved in the Warring jury-tampering charges to show cause why they should not be convicted of contempt of court.

States Pledge Support

The law enforcement body was created at a meeting at which high police officials of the District, Maryland and Virginia pledged "full-time support" in defeating gambling operations and numbers racketeers. They also agreed to work together to secure enactment by Congress of a "fresh pursuit" law.

The body will be known as "The District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia Law Enforcement Officers' Association." Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel, was made secretary.

Maj. Brown submitted to the group a six-point program designed to organize more effectively the drive against crime in the three jurisdictions.

Would Aid Pursuit

Besides drafting and submitting to Congress legislation authorizing pursuit of law-breakers from the District into Maryland or Virginia, the program consists of the following:

Legislation to enable adjoining jurisdictions and the District to proceed more effectively against gambling and the numbers game.

Vesting authority in the law enforcement officers of the three jurisdictions to arrest traffic violators for major offenses, such as hit-run cases, driving while drunk, reckless driving or speeding.

Co-operative effort in handling the large number of transients visiting the District.

Deputizing officers of the three jurisdictions with power to arrest in any of the three.

Woman, Two Men Charged With Operating Lottery

Members of the vice-squad yesterday arrested a woman and two men and charged them with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

Mrs. Ethel Mae Dodd, 40, and her husband, Everett, also 40, both of 808 Sixth street northwest were arrested at their home. Raymond Goodman, 44, who told police he lived at the Central Y. M. C. A., was trailed from the house by Detective Sergt. Devoe and members of the squad to New Jersey and Massachusetts avenues northwest, where he was arrested.

All were brought before United States Commissioner Turnage and released on $1,500 bond each for hearing February 20.

Marion Talley's Husband To Sue for Separation

First He Must Find Singer Who Seeks Custody of Child

By the Associated Press.

White Plains, N. Y., Feb. 15.—Counsel for Adolph Eckstrom, estranged husband of Marion Talley, said tonight he would sue the former opera prodigy for a separation on grounds of abandonment as soon as she could be found.

Miss Talley's whereabouts remained secret today as Supreme Court Justice Gerald Nolan hinted he might dismiss her suit against Eckstrom's family to regain custody of the 3-year-old daughter she left in the care of others when she went into the movies.

Papers in the separation suit will include a petition for custody of the child, Eckstrom's lawyer said, and will be filed in New York County as soon as Miss Talley can be served. Her attorneys claimed today that Eckstrom, also named in the custody suit here, was evading service of summons.

A mystery developed, meanwhile, over the birthplace of Susan Eckstrom, who will be 4 in April.

Both Eckstrom's secretary and his attorney said Susan was born in St. Paul, Minn.; but Minnesota health authorities said no child named Susan Eckstrom or Susan Talley appeared in the birth registry.

The singer charged that without an immediate operation the child might go blind in one eye within a year and that Eckstrom had refused to have it performed.

Eckstrom's secretary, Miss Edith Klein, who has cared for Susan since she was 2, said, "Our doctors have told us that it would be unwise to operate until Susan is 8 or 9 years old."

Miss Talley in her petition, which disclosed the child's existence publicly for the first time only last week, offered "a mother's personal attention . . . and the best educational and social facilities and medical attention money can buy."

Robert Tells Georgia He Got Too Little

Denies 'Promotion' Fee For Public Works; Says He Should Get More

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Feb. 15.—L. W. (Chip) Robert, secretary of the Democratic National executive committee, told legislative investigators today that, far from overcharging on a State architectural contract, he should have obtained a 7½ per cent fee instead of 6 per cent.

Robert came voluntarily from Washington to deny before the House economy committee that the firm of Robert & Co. had charged an additional 1 per cent fee for "promotion" in a contract with the State welfare department for work on the State's $5,000,000 hospital building program at Milledgeville.

At hearings last week it was asserted 5 per cent was the customary charge for work such as Robert's architectural company was doing and strongly intimated that the added per cent was for "promotion."

Denies Promotion Work

This led to adoption by the House yesterday of a resolution calling on the State to abrogate the contract "if possible." At the same time Representative Delacey Allen, of Albany, bluntly denounced the contract as "stealing . . . the taxpayers' money."

Robert said for work similar to the Milledgeville project his firm had obtained 6½ per cent in Florida.

When Robert said much of the preliminary work included "contacting Federal agencies to obtain funds," a committeeman asked him if that wasn't promotion.

"Certainly not," said Robert, "that's organization."

Committeemen were silent at the close of Robert's two hours of testimony but indicated they would call State welfare board members for questioning tomorrow.

InsuranceHead Bares 'Inside' Sales Methods

Quiz Told How Firm Benefited Through Interlocking Directors

The chairman of the board of a New York fire insurance company—of which former Commissioner George E. Allen is vice president—told the Congressional Monopoly Investigating Committee yesterday that his firm frankly chooses directors with an eye to their ability to bring in new business.

The directors are paid an annual salary of $4,000 for this purpose, said Wilfred Kurth, of the Home Insurance Co. His testimony formed part of a picture of interlocking directorates among insurance companies, banks and business corporations that was built up during the day by Gerhard Gesell, special counsel for the SEC.

Meanwhile, the monopoly committee indicated that the next type of business to be investigated will be the alcoholic beverage industry. It was stated broad questionnaires have been sent "to a number of distillers and importers" inquiring into their corporate structure and business methods.

Kurth, who smilingly gave his testimony while Allen sat quietly in the audience, told the committee he considered it "very important" to have directors holding a large number of directorships in other concerns which might give business to the home company. He added with emphasis that they earn their salary.

"Perhaps I shouldn't say this—perhaps the competition hasn't realized the advantages of using directors," observed Kurth. Informing the committee that one of his directors is an alumnus of Columbia University, Kurth said—amidst a burst of laughter, "We found that the insurance on Columbia is with

Let Students Buy Liquor If 21, St. John's Head Urges

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 15.—A bill permitting liquor dealers to sell their wares to St. John's College students—if they are over 21—was laid before the Legislature today along with a plea from the students and approval of the college president.

The Anne Arundel County delegation introduced the bill in the Maryland House of Delegates after 75 St. John's College students had signed a petition urging emergency legislation repealing the 30-year-old statute which keeps them from buying wine, beer and liquor in Annapolis.

Dr. Stringfellow Barr, president of the college for 18 months, wrote a letter to the legislators in which he said "the arguments advanced seem to be good ones."

"My experience has been that the law has an unintentionally demoralizing effect," Barr declared.

"The authorities of St. John's College are deeply interested in the sobriety and general good conduct of the undergraduate members of the college, but it is my sincerest belief that this goal will be better attained if the present law is amended."

The St. John's students—about three-fifths of the student body—declared the statute had created for them a situation similar to that during national prohibition.

"This situation has fostered dishonesty, smuggling and the transportation of liquors from out of the city," they declared.

Dr. Barr said he would be glad to appear before the Anne Arundel delegation and tell them personally why he favored the change proposed by the students.

Four Killed As Gales Sweep East

Tornados, Floods, Rain, Fog Wreak Destruction and Injure Many

Terrific winds sweeping from the southwest, floods, pounding rain and fog which lay like a leaden pall for hours yesterday brought death and destruction to the Eastern United States and the paralyzing fear of another catastrophe like last September's.

In Alabama, where the storm was brewed, a man was killed, his wife injured and a colored woman killed by a tornado which smashed their homes into the earth. Two men were killed in New Jersey. Four men were injured at Hagerstown, Md.; three at Greenville, S. C.; six near Macon, Miss., and three at Asheville, N. C.

At Hagerstown, several buildings were wrecked, one on which the four injured men were working when a gale roared through the city at 45 to 50 miles an hour.

Bugeye Sinks

In Chesapeak Bay, five ocean-going vessels were stopped by fog and lay to, their sirens hooting. Others were prevented from leaving Baltimore. The 80 ton bugeye P. J. Elbourn, loaded with oyster shells, ran aground in the fog near Rock Hall and sank within an hour, its crew of two escaping to a shore boat.

Two vessels bound to Baltimore from Philadelphia had not arrived several hours after passing through the Chesapeake and Delaware canal.

North Carolina suffered from wind, rain and high water. More than 100 homes were ripped to splinters by a tornado at Asheville. Rivers in eastern North Carolina, already high, went out of their banks and families were forced to seek safety on high ground.

Three Saved from Sewer

Three WPA workers, trapped neck deep in a flooded Brooklyn, N. Y., sewer, were rescued.

A Connecticut highway bridge between Stafford Springs and Willimantic was carried away by flooded Roaring Creek.

A tide 3 feet above normal in Providence, R. I., worried waterfront dwellers and downtown Providence late yesterday. Thousands feared September's hurricane and flood conditions might return, as the Weather Bureau warned of increasing high winds.

In Virginia, a 43-mile wind blew for 5 minutes in Lynchburg, leveling trees and causing high property damage. In Richmond, a 33-mile wind was recorded.

Officials in the Washington airport control tower said the wind, shifting from warm southwest breezes to gusty northwest gales, was recorded at 65 miles per hour around noon.

The Weather Bureau forecaster said more northwest winds would sweep Washington today.

D. C. Traffic Dead For '39 Reach 15 As 2 More Die

Washington's 1939 traffic toll reached 15 yesterday as two persons, one the victim of a hit-run driver, died from injuries.

Mrs. Minnie Cady, 79, of 1115 B street northeast, died at her home from hurts suffered when struck by a hit-run driver last November 8, while walking across Connecticut avenue at Davenport street.

Frank Keeley, 48, of 1020 Upshur street northwest, died at Casualty Hospital from injuries received February 7, when struck by an automobile.

Kelly Naimons, colored, 38, of 526 G street southwest, was in Gallinger Hospital this morning with a fractured skull and two broken ankles suffered when an automobile driven by Charles Abbate, 38, of 1016 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, ran over him as he was lying in the street at Independence and Delaware avenues southwest.

N. Y. Jury Seeks To Oust Brooklyn Magistrate

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—Removal of Magistrate Mark Rudich was sought today by the special grand jury investigating charges of alleged official corruption in Brooklyn.

The jury listed eight charges of misconduct, including bribery.

Special Prosecutor John Harlan Amen said he was investigating "a lot of bankruptcy cases in which judges are involved."

Britain Acts To Recognize Franco's Rule

Cabinet Unanimous; Paris to Follow; U. S. Holds Back to Wait Clarification

By the United Press.

London, Feb. 15.—The British cabinet today decided unanimously to grant de facto recognition to Gen. Franco's government in Spain.

The cabinet gave Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax full authority to announce the decision at an appropriate moment after consulting the French government.

The cabinet also agreed in principle to grant Franco de jure recognition as soon as certain legal difficulties have been cleared up.

France Ready to Act

De facto recognition means Britain shortly will recognize Franco as the effective master of Spain. Subsequent de jure recognition will mean Britain recognizes Franco's regime as the legal government.

Meanwhile France apparently was preparing for de jure recognition. Government quarters here interpreted the action of the French cabinet yesterday as amounting to agreement in principle, despite failure to grant open recognition. This belief was based on the decision to send back to Burgos Senator Leon Berard as head of an official mission, but without ambassadorial status.

Peru became the first South American nation to recognize Franco's as the legal government of Spain. Peru severed relations with the Madrid government in March, 1938, after the Peruvian consulate was raided.

Washington to Delay

Reports from Buenos Aires last night indicated both Argentina and Brazil would recognize Franco by the end of this week.

In Washington indications were that the United States would take no action pending clarification of the situation. State Department officials said neither Great Britain nor any other foreign government had approached this Government on the matter.

[The Spanish insurgent government is withholding recognition of five United States consular offices pending United States acceptance of Franco's regime, the Associated Press reported from Burgos. Four of the offices, however, are being permitted to discharge their duties unhindered, the Barcelona office being the exception. The insurgent regime has adopted the same attitude toward other governments in the Catalonian capital.—Editor's note.]

Refusing to Leap, Aide Dies; Paredes Hurt in Crash

Bloomsdale, Mo., Feb. 15 (AP).—An Army combat plane crashed north of here today, killing Private F. F. George, who refused to heed the pilot's command to jump with a parachute.

The pilot, Lieut. Isidor Paredes, of the Philippine Army, suffered a skull injury.

Before the plane fell, Paredes said "I told Private George to jump, but he replied, 'I'll stick with you.'"

Lieut. Paredes is the son of Quintin Paredes, former Philippine resident commissioner in Washington. His brother, Lucas Paredes, said in Washington he had been informed Lieut. Paredes' injuries were "serious but not necessarily fatal."

Roosevelt, Well, Leaves Tonight For Caribbean

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt, virtually recovered from the grip, intends to depart tonight for a ten-day Caribbean cruise that will permit him to see part of the fleet maneuvers.

Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, kept him in his second floor bedroom and study yesterday for the sixth day in a row, but reported him fit to undertake the journey.

The President received Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian foreign minister, and members of the official Brazilian mission, and conferred with Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA chief, and Attorney General Murphy.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Feb. 15.—The British government disclosed tonight in a White Paper that it would spend on its navy, air force, army and civil defenses in the coming fiscal year the record-breaking peace-time total of £580,000,000 ($2,726,0000,000), or £175,000,000 ($822,500,000) more than in the current year ending March 31.

Of particular interest to America is Britain's determination to keep on expanding her fleet as fast as her shipyards can accommodate new keels. In the forthcoming financial year, about 60 men-of-war are to be laid down, including two capital ships. Whether this pair will exceed 35,000 tons each will be revealed shortly when detailed estimates are published by the admiralty.

Ships Under Construction

Two capital ships were included in the construction program for 1936, three in 1937 and two in 1938. With the additional pair of the 1939 program, Britain will have nine capital ships under construction simultaneously, and with their completion she will have a grand total of 24 battleships and battle cruisers, some of them dating from the World War period, but lately modernized.

Provision will be made in 1939 for the building of another aircraft carrier, making six in all under construction.

The 1939 program also will include four large cruisers mounting 6-inch guns; two destroyer flotillas and 20 fast escort vessels of a new type intended for the protection of shipping against submarine and air attacks. This is Britain's answer to Germany's resolve to double her submarine fleet and seek parity with Britain in total tonnage in that category.

"Some smaller vessels"—not otherwise identified—also are projected.

Naval Race Outdone

The naval building race between Britain and Germany which is generally held to have been an important cause of the World War is outdone by the present expansion of fleets.

For instance, Britain's average annual tonnage of the principal classes of warships, excluding submarines completed during the three fiscal years, 1911, 1912, 1913, was 170,000. The corresponding average for the tonnage scheduled to be completed in the two years, 1940 and 1941, is 219,500.

Modernization of the 15 existing capital ships is proceeding steadily, and three ships are now laid up for this purpose. Progress is reported in strengthening the anti-aircraft armaments of other warships.

Big as is the expansion of the navy, the expansion of the Royal Air Force will be costlier in the coming year as more than £200,000,000 ($940,000,000) is to be spent on war aviation. The monthly rate of delivery of aircraft has been doubled in the current year, and the white paper promises that the Mystery Plane Pilot 'Loafed' At 420 M. P. H.

Army's New Fighter Not Skimped in Equipment, He Says

"If we had been interested in a record, I wouldn't have loafed along."

That was what Lieut. Ben S. Kelsey, pilot of last Saturday's coast-to-coast flight, said yesterday, as he revealed that the newest twin-engined Army fighter reached a speed of 7 miles a minute in the seven-hour dash.

Here to report to War Department officials on the performance of the plane, Lieut Kelsey said that he 'hadn't opened it up" during the 2,460-mile jaunt.

"I kept the plane at cruising speed during the whole flight, as a test of what a standard military plane can do under usual circumstances," he declared.

Hits 420 Miles an Hour

Air Corps officials said, however, that the 365-mile-an-hour average speed of the flight, broke "by far" all world records for military distance flights.

The young pilot looked none the worse for his crack-up in landing at Mitchel Field, which partially destroyed the new Lockheed single seater pursuit plane. Scotching reports that "pilot fatigue" was responsible for the crash, Lieut. Kelsey said that he was "not tired at all"

Soviets Sending Mission to Study Buying Fleet Here

Moscow, Feb. 15 (AP).—Disclosure that Admiral I. S. Isakoff, vice admiral of the navy, and several naval specialists plan to sail soon for the United States, caused speculation today that Soviet Russia intends to revive plans for construction of a part of her war fleet in American shipyards.

Russia recently announced her intention of building a fleet that would be capable of driving any enemy from the seas.

In August, 1937, a proposal to build two or three large battleships in American shipyards fell through.

House Group Votes to Keep Guam as Navy Outpost

The House Naval Committee voted yesterday to establish naval aviation facilities at Guam, after a high naval official told the members the proposed island development would prevent destruction of several cruisers in any Pacific war.

After rejecting, 14 to 5, an attempt to strike the Guam proposal from the bill, the House group gave tentative approval to establishment of 11 other air bases in the Atlantic and Pacific at a cost of $68,900,000. Meeting today, the committee will vote on location of the proposed major Southeastern air base, with a view to placing the measure before the House early next week.

Questioned by members as to need for the $5,000,000 harbor development at Guam, Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, declared that it gives the Navy an advanced scouting base to give the United States Fleet warning of an attack from Asia.

"If plane facilities are not provided at Guam," Admiral Cook declared, "the Fleet Commander would have to send several costly ships to scout the Western Pacific in war time and they probably would be lost.

"With this development, our western defense line would still be through Alaska and Hawaii, but Guam would control the approaches of the Pacific from Australia through Kamchatka."

The naval aviation chief testified that the 12 to 24 patrol planes which the Navy plans to maintain on the island would drop back to Hawaii or other American islands immediately upon approach of an

Party Lines Forgotten

By Robert C. Albright.

The House by a vote of 367 to 15 yesterday overwhelmingly approved the President's $367,000,000 Army defense program designed to bring the War Department fighting arm up to 5,500 planes in two years, bulwark Panama Canal defenses and prepare industry for war mobilization.

Passed virtually without change, the Army expansion pillar of the President's preparedness program was sped to the Senate. Chairman Sheppard called a meeting of his Senate Military Affairs Committee tomorrow to speed action on the measure.

"Slagger" Amendment Fails

Only one Democrat (Representative Houston, of Kansas), and 14 Republicans voted "no" on final House passage after the Republican minority had failed in an effort to limit new Army plane authorizations to 1,000 a year. By a 183 to 136 strictly party vote, the House turned back a Republican amendment to stagger construction of 3,032 new planes over three years.

Rejection of the change and approval of every provision of the bill followed a speech by Majority Leader Sam Rayburn pleading for flexibility in the program, reminding members of this Nation's World War unpreparedness and warning that "volcanic" European conditions threaten the world.

Earlier Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia, stressed the strategic importance of England and France in defense of America's own shores. Warning of the imminence of a European outbreak, Pace declared the President "might well have said 'our first line of defense is England and France.'" He said America will be threatened "if we see England and France go down."

While the House rushed the Army bill to passage, the House Naval Affairs Committee agreed on all essential provisions of the Navy's defense bill.

French Sales to Be Aired

Meantime, the Senate Military Affairs Committee heard four War, Navy and Treasury officials testify on sale of military airplanes to France, and agreed to make public today a record of their testimony "except military secrets." Chairman Sheppard estimated about 40 per cent of the record is of a secret nature and will not be divulged. Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, said the witnesses talked mostly off the record, and there will be little information in the transcript.

Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, said the committee agreed, on his motion, to call Ambassador to Germany Hugh Wilson to testify on European conditions at a date convenient to the committee.

Ambassador Wilson has remained in this country since he was called back from Berlin several weeks ago to report to the President. Bridges said he thought Wilson should testify inasmuch as Ambassador to Great Britain Kennedy and Ambassador to France Bullitt appeared before a joint session of House and Senate Military Affairs committees early in the year. The New Hampshire Republican said he had a "suspicion" Wilson's views might not coincide with those of "—suspected a trick"

Target practice used to get controversial outside Pekin, according to Washington Army officers who have served in China.

The Jap, French, British and American rifle ranges were close together in the Pekin suburbs, and some of the others were incredulous when the Americans actually tried to hit (and did hit) bull's-eyes 1,000 yards away.

The others couldn't shoot a rifle for sour apples.

The Japs thought it was just a trick, with someone hidden near the targets who shot bullets into 'em at close ranges.

The British soldiers were annoyed, and claimed American rifles were much more accurate and equipped with better sights.

The French contended that American soldiers simply kept their rifles in better condition—which they do.

So the Americans merely traded rifles with 'em and outshot 'em with their own guns.

An election like the last one has its tragedies, much as the American voter is disinclined to sympathize with a politician. Scores of men who thought they were embarked on careers as statesmen were beaten.

But one of the saddest happened to Congressman Henry Talle, of Iowa, who was elected . . .

Once before he had come close; this time he made it. But Mrs. Talle died between election day and the day her husband took his seat.

"—extravagant of Dolly"

When a Vice President shaves in his suite off the Senate, he can if he likes use the French gilt mirror which Dolly Madison bought for $60 when she was in the White House more than 100 years ago. Congress thought it was such an extravagance that there was a movement to censure her.

• • • •

I'm not sure that Jack Garner ever shaves in Dolly's $60 mirror. He has a comfortable bathroom to shave in if he hasn't had time so shave before the ungodly early hour when he and Mrs. Garner reach Capitol Hill from their downtown hotel.

Why a Vice President needs to get to work before 8 a. m., no one can understand.

Like the Navy's top admiral, Chief of Staff Malin Craig, the Army's top general, gets a free house at Washington. It's across the river and up the hill, at Fort Myer, behind Arlington Military Cemetery.

Like Admiral Leahy's, it's much like the sort of old brick house a village squire lives in, but typical Army post architecture.

• • • •

It has large porches, a long living room and a very large dining room. In front of it are two small antique cannon, with handles. It's probably tidier than your house or mine; soldiers keep it immaculate.

The general gets $432 a year for subsistence, above his $8,000 salary and $2,200 allowances for his rank. That's $6 less than Admiral Leahy gets; maybe the Craigs eat less than the Leahys.

Women Assail Winslow Appointment

Involves Ousting Of Miss Stevens From Commission

Presidential appointment of Miss Mary Winslow as United States representative on the Inter-American Commission of Women has aroused a storm of controversy among women's organizations, it developed yesterday.

The appointment involves outsing of Miss Doris Stevens from the chairmanship of the commission, a position she has held since the commission was set up as an autonomous body by the Inter-American conference at Havana in 1928.

It is the official contention that Miss Stevens was never the regularly appointed representative of this country. Appointment of Miss Winslow followed action of the recent confreence at Lima approving work of the commission and calling on all American governments "which as yet have not appointed their representatives" to make selections.

Involved in the controversy is the stressing of equal rights and nondiscriminatory legislation for women which has marked Miss Stevens' activities both in the Inter-American body and in the Woman's Party she previously headed.

Her Work Praised

Friends of Miss Winslow favor wider policies and activities, embracing women's social welfare work, protective legislation and humanitarian projects.

On behalf of Miss Stevens, Emma Guffey Miller, sister of Senator Guffey and Democratic national committeewoman from Pennsylvania, has declared there was no vacancy to which Miss Winslow could be appointed.

Miss Catherine Lewis, one of this country's delegates to the Lima conference, praised the work of Miss Stevens and the commission at that gathering.

On the other hand, Miss Winslow was championed by Secretary of Labor Perkins at a luncheon of the Newspaper Women's Club yesterday. Miss Perkins is reported to have said this is the first time an American woman has been appointed to the commission.

Helped Appointment

Marguerite Wells, National League of Women Voters president and Agnes G. Regan, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Women, also spoke approvingly of Miss Winslow. Miss Winslow gave credit to the early organizers of the Inter-American Commission and declared it was going to embark on a broader field in which all women's problems, not just legal rights, would be considered.

Friends of Miss Stevens have expressed belief Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretary Perkins and Miss Mary Dewson, former vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, helped bring about appointment of Miss Winslow after Miss Stevens had spent 10 years in the unpaid position.

Reed to Push Merit Rating For All Clerks

Special Committee Starts Work Saturday With All-Day Session

A merit system which would cover the entire Government service with the exception of a handful of policy-making positions at the top is the goal of the special committee headed by Justice Stanley Reed, of the Supreme Court, it was learned yesterday.

The committee, it was disclosed, will formally tackle at an all-day meeting Saturday its task of working out plans for placing lawyers, subordinate administrative officials, scientists and other technicians under civil service.

An organization meeting for the purpose of apportioning duties of members will be held at 10 a. m. Saturday. In the afternoon, the committee will meet with members of the Civil Service Commission.

In announcing appointment of the committee January 31, President Roosevelt revealed that 5,000 persons who otherwise would have been blanketed into civil service by his order of last June would be exempted temporarily until the committee could work out suitable methods for recruiting higher-bracket personnel.

The committee's job will be to devise realistic and elastic plans which will make it possible to obtain for the Government service personnel of the highest caliber.

The standards, in the opinion of some committee members, should make it possible to extend the merit system up to the level of a few policy-making officials. The only persons exempted would be Presidential appointees, chiefly undersecretaries and assistant secretaries of departments.

Arizona Senate Urges Bratton for Supreme Bench to 'Safeguard' the Entire Nation

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 15 (AP).—the Arizona Senate urged in a resolution today that President Roosevelt appoint Circuit Judge Sam Bratton, of New Mexico, to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court caused by retirement of Justice Louis D. Brandeis.

SAM BRATTON

The Senate described Judge Brattan as a "jurist of high attainment, judicial temperament and splendid character and a man eminently qualified for the exalted position." His appointment, the resolution said, "would safeguard the interests of the Nation and insure a continuation of the high repute in which the Supreme Court is held."

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Nathan Straus, Federal Housing Administrator, today disclosed application for a project in Red Level, Ala. Red Level, with a population of 800, wanted a project to rehouse 600 persons.

By the Associated Press.

Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing administrator, urged the house Banking Committee yesterday to approve legislation raising from $3,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000 the amount of mortgage insurance the FHA may have outstanding at any one time.

The bill would make half a dozen other changes in the national housing act, the most important of which would remove a limitation which would prevent the FHA from insuring mortgages on existing houses after July 1 unless the dwellings previously had been covered by FHA-insured mortgages or were built later than January 1, 1937.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, introduced a bill to provide for deportation of aliens who do not take out first naturalization papers within a year after they become eligible.

The American Trucking Associations, Inc., expressed opposition to reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Commission as proposed in a transportation bill by Chairman Lea (Democrat), of California, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

J. N. Beall, general counsel of the trucking organization, told the committee that instead of increasing the number of commissioners from 11 to 19, Congress should give the agency more authority over all carriers and a larger staff, with more examiners and inspectors.

Beall said Lea's proposal to increase the commission and divide it into fixed groups charged with separate functions would make it impossible for individual commissioners to "see the whole picture."

The House Merchant Marine Committee approved legislation to exempt all vessels of less than 200 gross tons from terms of the International Labor Conference ing competency certificates for officers of all sea-going vessels.

Townsend Plan Called Cure for Half-Dozen Ills

By the Associated Press.

Representative Smith (Democrat), Washington, told the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday the Townsend old-age pension plan would give the Nation $19,200,000,000 more buying power a year.

"It is a pay-as-you-go national recovery plan," Smith asserted, "and far less costly than our present bond-debt-creating system with its appalling interest burden.

"It will solve the problems of old age security, relief, business depression, unemployment and our annual crime bill."

Mrs. Wilson Ruled Against An Operation

Widow of Ex-President Tells of Decision That Prolonged His Life

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 15.—Mrs. Edith Boiling Wilson, widow of the President, today described publicly for the first time her problem in choosing between two alternatives, either of which might have been fatal to her husband when he became ill in 1919.

In an article in the current Saturday Evening Post, Mrs. Wilson tells how the responsibility of deciding whether a major operation should be performed on the President devolved upon her. She decided against it, and Woodrow Wilson's life was prolonged five years.

The Presidential party had returned to the White House on Sunday morning, September 28, Mr. Wilson complaining of head pains and nausea. Two days later he had suffered a slight stroke.

Going to the President's room early one morning, Mrs. Wilson says in her memoirs, she found Mr. Wilson trying to reach a water bottle.

No Feeling in Hand

"As I handed it to him I noticed his left hand hung loosely," she relates. "'I have no feeling in that hand,'" she quotes the President as saying. "Every move brought spasms of pain. . . . I reached Dr. Grayson. (The late Admiral Cary T. Grayson, White House physician.) While at the phone I heard a slight noise, and rushing into my husband's apartment, I found him on the bathroom floor, unconscious. . . .

"Then came a knock on the door. . . . The knock was Grayson's. We lifted the President into his bed. He had suffered a stroke paralyzing the left side of his body. An arm and one leg were useless, but, thank God, the brain was clear and untouched.

"Such I. the story of that tragic morning of October 2, 1919."

Told by medical experts, hastily summoned, that her husband must be rid of all executive worries, Mrs. Wilson describes how Dr. Francis X. Dercum, a nerve specialist, suggested she take over the executive reins. She in turn suggested Mr. Wilson resign and let Vice President Marshall succeed to the Presidency.

Took Over Reins

This was advised against. "So began my stewardship," Mrs. Wilson writes, explaining that she never made a decision regarding disposition of public affairs.

Hardly had a workable system been evolved "when a terrible complication interrupted the progress of our patient," the article says.

"A stricture occurred, blocking elimination fro... the bladder. Its continuance meant death. A consultation of specialists was called. . . . "It was the 17th of October . . . finally Dr. Grayson said: "Well, Mrs. Wilson, all agree there is no alternative but an operation. And I feel sure the President can't stand one . . ."

"Then we will not operate," Mrs. Wilson replied.

Mrs. Wilson then describes the patient's steady gain, explaining "by Christmas he was able to sit up for a few hours each day."

WILL YOUR TIRES PASS INSPECTION?

New D. C. Compulsory Safety Inspection Law Becomes effective March 1st!

No automobile permitted to operate with unsafe lights, brakes, tires, etc., after March 1st. You will be notified when to present your car for inspection. Don't wait—have your tires ready—see us today!

Four Ways to Tire Safety and Savings!

1. GUARANTEED RECAPPING

If the sidewalls of your tires are in good condition, but the treads are worn smooth, they can be recapped to give as many miles of service as the original treads for less than ONE-HALF the cost of new tires. This gives your tires a brand-new tread—new-tire appearance and safety! Leave your car or we loan you tires while work is done.

5.00-16	$5.80
6.50-16	$7.00

2. SMOOTH TIRES REGROOVED

Smooth tires are dangerous, especially on wet pavement; yet, there is an average of one-fourth inch of rubber between the fabric and tread which can be utilized. Let us cut an anti-skid tread on your smooth tires—make them safe in all weather.

Any size passenger car tire $1.00

3. GUARANTEED USED TIRES

Our liberal trade-in policy on new tires has resulted in a huge stock of the finest used tires in the city. All carefully inspected for defects and guaranteed to give service—some like new! All sizes and makes to choose from.

6.00-16	$1.95

Susan Anthony Honored in Capitol Rites

Pittman, Ramspeck Lead Tribute to Equal Rights Pioneer

Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, and Representative Robert J. Ramspeck, of Georgia, last night led observance of the 119th birthday anniversary of Susan B. Anthony, equal rights pioneer.

In ceremonies before the Adelaide Johnson statue of the pioneer suffragettes, Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott, in the crypt of the Capitol, they paid tribute to the women whose work gained the franchise for their sex.

Marine Band Plays

The Marine Band softly played the "March of the Women," which was intimately associated with the campaign for woman suffrage, while delegates from more than 40 organizations laid wreaths at the base of the statue.

Dorothy Tyler, singer; Mildred Cooper, Mabelle Shoemaker and Mary Angeline Cooke presented a musical program.

Maud Howell Smith read Edna St. Vincent Millay's poem, "The Pioneers," written for the National Woman's Party on the occasion of the dedication of the statue.

Commemorative exercises also were held yesterday afternoon at the Quaker Meeting House, Gramercy Park, New York City. Mrs. Stephen Pell, Woman's Party national chairman, presided.

Will Irwin Speaks at N. Y.

Among the speakers were Alice Paul, founder of the Woman's Party and chairman of the World Woman's Party; Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women; Lydia Foulke Taylor, trustee of Swarthmore College; Will Irwin, author, and Elizabeth Moreell Phillips, aviatrix and secretary of the Ninety-Nines.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, vice chairman of the Woman's Party, presided at the ceremonies in the crypt of the Capitol.

Child's Support Held Up to Absent Father

Problem Increases D. C. Relief Costs, Lewis Declares

Some means should be devised requiring fathers of illegitimate children to support them, Burdette G. Lewis, District relief investigator, declared yesterday in another section of his report on local relief problems.

This suggestion was part of a four-point program outlined by Lewis for dealing with the problem of illegitimacy among District recipients of public assistance.

He also recommended that separation of mother and child should be prevented, except in cases where separation would be to the child's advantage; that the child's parentage be established, and that proper welfare facilities for maintenance, education and protection of both mother and child be provided.

Lewis said there was no evidence to support charges made in the last Congress that "illegitimacy is of greater frequency among aid to dependent children or public assistance division clients than in the general population."

He emphasized, however, that illegitimacy adds considerably to District relief costs.

Although he commended the Public Assistance Division for adopting a policy whereby "the moralistic issues of illegitimacy have been subordinated to the attempt to do something for the child," this step, he said, has not been co-ordinated with an effective case-work, home rehabilitation and educational program.

The result, he said, has been "disease, more illegitimacy, lower morale and hardship for the child."

In 1937, he said, 10.7 per cent of all registered District births were illegitimate. Of the total illegitimate births, 23.1 per cent were white and 76.9 colored.

"Approximately one out of every five births in Negro families was illegitimate," Lewis declared, "whereas only one out of every 25 white births was so classified."

Frank Keely Rites Planned Saturday; Victim of Crash

British

coming year will show "further substantial increases."

By next March 31 the number of first line aircraft in the so-called metropolitan force, will have increased to the figure of 175 as scheduled for completion at that date. Already the government is busy on an expansion to provide a metropolitan force of approximately 2,370 aircraft, plus an overseas strength of 500 and several hundred more for the fleet air arm. A third stage of expansion is under active preparation.

The white paper contains little reference to American assistance, merely saying, "Orders for the supply of general reconnaissance and and training aircraft have been placed in the United States of America." Contracts have been placed in Canada for large bombers and fighters, and a mission is visiting Australia and New Zealand to enlist their co-operation.

The balloon barrage system which was started last year has now spread to the provinces and comprises 47 squadrons.

As for the army, the white paper reports that its equipment with up-to-date weapons and the accumulation of the approved scale of war reserves is proceeding rapidly. "Very substantial progress" has been made in supplying new antiaircraft guns and searchlights.

The expenditures on the navy, air force and army in the coming year, will aggregate roughly £523,000,000 ($2,458,100,000). The "war bill" of £580,000,000 ($2,726,000,000), will also include over £42,000,000 ($197,400,000) for air-raid precautions; £9,000,000 ($42,300,000) for vital public utility services, and water for emergency fire-fighting purposes, and £5,000,000 ($23,500,000) for storage of foodstuffs, fertilizers and petroleum against wartime scarcity.

To meet this huge bill, the government has decided to borrow.

The defense loan act of 1937 authorized the government to borrow up to £400,000,000 ($1,880,000,000) for armaments, and almost half of this is already spent. The government tonight disclosed that it will ask Parliament to "double the ante," raising to £800,000,000 ($3,760,000,000) the amount that can be borrowed in the open market, and from the old sinking fund.

Originally the government planned to spend the grand total of £1,500,000,000 ($7,050,000,000) during the five-year period, 1937-1942. However, the government now deems it necessary to spend far more than this figure—so much more that it cannot publish any precise figure.

Obviously, the government wishes to be free to spend as much or as little as it has to, depending upon construction programs in Germany and other countries.

The white paper concludes with this justification of policy:

"The increase in the cost of the program and the further borrowing powers required are largely necessitated by the increase in our defensive strength to meet the risk of air attacks. It is everywhere recognized our armaments have no aggressive purpose.

"His Majesty's government deeply deplored the need for the expenditure of these large sums on armaments. They have already indicated that when other nations are prepared to consider some arrangement for limitation of armaments, this country will be prepared to play its part, but in the absence of a general reduction of armaments it is inevitable that this country should continue to take the steps necessary in the light of present developments, for its own protection and for the discharge of its responsibilities elsewhere.

"It follows that, in these circumstances, it is not possible to give any precise estimate of the total cost of defense measures over the period April 1937 to March 1942. His Majesty's government is pressing forward with the programs outlined in this paper. They are confident that the people of this country will be ready to bear the heavy burden involved and will share the determination of His Majesty's government to insure the adequacy of our defense preparations."

Imredi Resigns On Finding He's Partly Jewish

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Count Paul Teleki, former minister of education (above), was summoned by Regent Nicholas Horthy when Premier Bela Imredi (below) and his cabinet resigned today.

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Feb. 15.—Discovery of Bela Imredi that he himself is partly Jewish helped bring about his resignation as premier of Hungary today and left the anti-Semitic program he had drafted to be disposed of by a successor.

Sixty-year-old Count Paul Teleki was asked by Regent Horthy to form a new government to succeed Imredi's nine month regime. Teleki was minister of education in Imredi's cabinet.

Count Teleki's first effort to form a cabinet ended in failure, as did a short-lived attempt by Franz Keresztes-Fischer, Imredi's minister of interior.

Martial law kept Budapest unusually quiet.

Developments indicated the governmental shift might not be displeasing to Germany—this in spite of the fact that Teleki has not been identified with the nationalists led by Imredi and had resisted Imredi's authoritarian measures.

Imredi, who discovered that one of his great grandfathers was a Jew, explained to his party followers that having learned this, he considered himself handicapped for administration of the anti-Semitic laws which where to have been considered in Parliament today.

This was widely regarded as showing that the new regime was expected to continue following Germany's lead in eliminating Jews from positions of power.

Another pointer lay in statements emanating from various governmental sources that succeeds in forming a new cabinet. Count Stefan Csaky, Imredi's foreign minister who negotiated Hungarian participation in the anti-comintern pact, probably would remain in the government.

Guam Air Base Kept in House Bill, 14 to 5

enemy fleet. Unless further provision is made for fortifying Guam, it "could not last a day" if attacked, he added.

Before taking up the Guam project, the committee approved a number of amendments to the bill. Six hundred thousand dollars was added to acquire additional land and make improvements at the Naval air base at Hampton Roads, Va., $1,800,000 was allowed for new buildings at the Philadelphia Aircraft factory—and $1,500,000 provided for a new air base at Tongue Point, Oreg.

Another amendment authorizes the Navy to accept without cost land at Corpus Christi, Tex., for establishment of a naval air training center.

Republican ranks split on the vote on Guam, with Representatives Maas, of Minnesota; Mott, or Oregon, and Eaton of California, joining 11 Democrats in voting for the base. Five Republicans voted against the move: Church, of Illinois; Cole, of New York; Bates, of Massachusetts; Hess, of Ohio, and Jenks, of New Hampshire.

Rear Admiral Ben Moreel, chief civil engineer of the Navy, told the committee legislation was not actually necessary for the harbor improvement work at Guam as the work could be carried on under general law. He declared that specific authority was asked as the "Navy decided to lay its cards on the table as to Guam."

United States Policy Attacked

Berlin (Thursday), Feb. 16 (AP).—A sharp attack on the United States rearmament policy and its sale of war materials to European countries was made today by Reichsfuehrer Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter in comment on Britain's new armaments loan.

Hitler's paper declined to criticise Britain, but of United States armament the Beobachter said it regretted the tempo of rearming was determined by states whose national requirements did not justify such measures.

"We are thinking primarily of the United States, which not only under a deliberately false pretext of 'the threatening of America' increases its own armaments by leaps and bounds, but also today in the midst of peace the United States appears in Europe as supplier of war material on a large scale and thus increases international tension emanating from this wave of armaments."

France Seeks Co-ordination

London, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Diplomatic quarters reported tonight France has proposed to Great Britain a general staff conference to coordinate their plans for defense in the Mediterranean, the Near East and the Far East.

Britain was expected to accept the proposal.

Italian Schools Put on 'Strictly Fascist Plane'

Rome (Thursday), Feb. 16. (U.P.).—The fascist grand council today approved a program of extensive reform in the national school system, designed to place all educational institutions, from kindergarten to university, on a strictly fascist plane."

Membership in semimilitary youth organizations would be made obligatory on all students.

"Schools must be guided by the fascist doctrine in the social, economic and physical fields," the council said.

House Votes 5,500 War Planes, Sends Defense Bill to Senate

Kennedy and Bullitt on the European situation.

Moving to terminate hearings on plane sales to France, Chairman Sheppard called Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Secretary of War Woodring to conclude testimony today.

Sheppard said the committee yesterday again reviewed the scope of the French plane transaction and developed some new information. Witnesses heard were Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations; Maj. Gen H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps; Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, and Sydney M. Kraus, naval captain assigned to the Treasury's procurement division.

Except for the minority fight for staggering new plane construction, partisan differences were laid aside in brisk House debate on the Army expansion program, Republicans overwhelmingly joining Democrats in the vote for final passage.

Arms Conference Fails

Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, vainly attempted to amend the bill to put the House on record for an international disarmament conference, with authority for the President to suspend parts of the defense program in accord with any conference agreement. His amendment lost on a point of order.

Chairman May, of the Military Affairs Committee, was overridden, 149 to 39, when he sought to strike from his own committee's bill a provision granting National Guard enlisted men and Reserve Corps officers, equal pension, retirement and hospitalization benefits with Regular Army officers if called to active duty. May said the provision had been approved without hearings and promised committee consideration of a substitute. The section was allowed to stand after Representative Edmiston, of West Virginia, and Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, both Democrats, led a vigorous fight for it.

Representative Miller (Republican), of Connecticut, legless war veteran, failed in a move to make the Government assume responsibility for injury or sickness to civilian instructors voluntarily receiving flying instruction at the Air Corps training center, in the only other attempt at amendment.

Provisions of Measure

Provisions of the measure:

Authorization of $300,000,000 for construction of about 3,032 planes in the next two years, in addition to those on hand or order. The increase would raise the Army's fighting plane strength to 5,500 in, 1941, of which about 2,100 will be held in reserve without personnel.

Authorization of $23,750,000 to strengthen vital Panama Canal defenses, increasing the canal garrison by 200 officers and 7,000 enlisted men, providing new barracks and improving antiaircraft fortifications.

War Department authorized to spend $34,500,000 on "educational orders" designed to prepare industry for the war task of producing munitions and to materially reduce the time lag in reaching mass production for war.

A training program for 20,000 civilian pilots annually at approved colleges and universities at a cost of $10,000,000, with the War Department enabled to supply instructors and equipment, and authorized to train civilian instructors.

A total authorized increase in Army officer strength from 12,720 at present to 16,719, and an enlisted strength increase from 165,000 at present to a peacetime high of 200,000. The authorized enlisted strength of the Air Corps alone would be about 25,000 above present levels, with another enlisted increase of about 7,500 in supporting arms.

The 14 Republicans voting "No" were Bolles, of Wisconsin; Carlson, of Kansas; Curtis, of Nebraska; Knutson, of Minnesota; Lambertson, of Kansas; Lemke, of North Dakota; Murray, of Wisconsin; Rich, of Pennsylvania; Rockefeller, of New York; Thill, of Wisconsin; Andersen, of Minnesota; Hope, of Kansas; Rees, of Kansas, and Burdick, of North Dakota. As Representative Houston was the only Democrat to vote against passage, so Representative C. Arthur Anderson, of Missouri, was the only Democrat to vote with Republicans on the sole partisan issue in the bill—the amendment by Representative Andrews (Republican), of New York, to spread the new plane construction over three years.

Rayburn Takes Floor

It was against the Andrews amendment that Majority Leader Rayburn took the floor to urge program flexibility. He said one must be "more than blind" not to recognize a world condition more serious than in 1914.

Urging that Congress be left free to appropriate for the total authorized planes as the need arises, the Democratic leader said:

"It might not be necessary, or it might not be feasible to build more than 500 planes the first year, and the second year it might be necessary for the defense of this country and for the peace of the world for the United States to build 2,500 planes.

"It might be necessary before the summer that faces us is over that America should set in motion the forces that will build the 3,000 planes in the next 12 months in order to let the world know that America, in planes, in ships, in men and in equipment, for those men, is ready to meet a world in arms."

Pace Defends President

Reviving the question of what the President told the Senate Military Affairs Committee in confidence two weeks ago, Representative Pace earlier told the House he did not think Mr. Roosevelt said "our frontier is on the Rhine," but declared the President would have been justified in saying the first line of defense was England and France.

Defending sales of planes to France, Pace asked members to "assume" that war comes in Europe in the spring, and to further "assume" that Germany and her allies are victorious.

"I ask," Pace said, "Isn't it better that we sell England and France, for cash, planes they need for their defense, than for ourselves to go to war with whoever is the conqueror in the event England and France go down."

Charles R. Crane, Ex-Envoy, Dies

Altadena, Calif., Feb. 15 (AP).—Charles R. Crane, 80, Minister to China in 1920 and 1921, died at his Palm Springs, Calif., winter home of pneumonia, relatives said here today.

A member of the prominent Chicago family and president of a plumbing supplies company, Crane represented the diplomatic service in Turkey and Russia before President Woodrow Wilson appointed him minister to China.

Two daughters, Mrs. H. C. Bradley, of Wisconsin, and Miss Frances Crane, of New York, and a son, John, now in Italy, survive.

French Guard Consulate After Anti-Duce Row

Ajaccio, Corsica, Feb. 15 (AP).—Anti-Italian demonstrations in this French island department led authorities today to act swiftly against disturbances that Italy might interpret as "provocations" favorable to Fascist colonial aspirations.

A heavy police guard was placed around the Italian consulate after a band of "young Corsicans" singing French national songs shattered windows of the consulate last night and demonstrated against an Italian press campaign for the satisfaction of what Italians Foreign Minister Ciano on November 30 called Italy's "natural aspirations."

France Raises Ban Against Old Enemy

Paris, Feb. 15 (AP).—The French government today issued a decree which permits two sons of Abd-el-Krim, once counted among France's bitterest enemies, to enter St. Cyr military academy, the "French West Point," and become officers in the French army.

The famous "Lord of the Rif," who tried to wrest the Moroccan protectorate from France, had asked that his sons be admitted, it was disclosed.

British companies — that'll be changed."

While in Kurth's testimony the SEC showed the material value of directors to the insurance company, it attempted, through the testimony of other insurance executives, to indicate the value of the company to the directors.

Thomas A. Buckner, chairman of the board of the New York Life Insurance Co., told the committee his firm gave business to some banks and insurance companies with which New York Life directors were connected.

"I think we should not be barred from acquiring the services of a corporation—where the cost is no greater and we believe it to be to our advantage to deal—just bcause one of our directors has a connection with that corporation," said Buckner, who has spent 59 of his 74 years in the service of New York Life.

Tells of Bank Tieup

"If we carried out your theory to its logical conclusion," he told Gesell, "we couldn't send a radiogram or buy a desk at Macy's." (Gen. James G. Harvord, chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, and Percy S. Straus, president of (Macy's New York department store, are both directors of New York Life.)

Gesell had introduced testimony showing that the insurance company has a $7,000,000 deposit with one New York bank with which it has an interlocking director, $5,000,000 deposits with two banks and smaller deposits with others.

Buckner denied these deposits had been made because of solicitation of the directors, and countered by pointing out that his company has $8,000,000 on deposit at a New York bank with which it has no joint director.

The name of Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York and Democratic nominee for the Presidency, was injected into the hearings by Gesell. He produced a letter from Smith, a director of New York Life and chairman of the board of the Meenan Oil Co., asking Buckner "to give our company an opportunity to bid" on the fuel oil requirements of the insurance firm.

Denies Action Was Unusual

H. H. Bottome, general counsel of the insurance company, said he saw nothing unusual in the procedure followed.

In response to a query of Gesell, Buckner said that New York Life had been placing its advertising through the Frank Presbrey agency before Presbrey was named to the board of the insurance company. He added that Presbrey said he would refuse to join the board if that involved loss of his business with the firm.

"He was assured," said Buckner, that there was no impropriety in continuing the business connection."

Gesell indicated that the New York law firm of Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine began acting for New York Life shortly after one of its partners, Arthur A. Ballantine, was elected to the insurance company board. The SEC counsel queried Buckner about New York Life's transactions with the Employers Liability Assurance Co., of which Charles D. Hilles, a New York Life director, is an official.

$334,000 Paid in Fees

Mitchell D. Follansbee, Chicago lawyer who has been a director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. for 24 years, testified that his firm had received about $334,000 in fees from the company since 1932.

"I am prepared to defend the reasonableness of our charges now or at any time," said Follansbee.

Prior to Follansbee's testimony, Gesell introduced into the record a section of the New York State insurance law that forbids directors or officers of insurance corporations to have any pecuniary interest in property or loan transactions of the company.

Mental Hygiene Division to Be Transferred Here

Dr. Lawrence Kolb, Assistant Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service in charge of the mental hygiene division, yesterday announced that headquarters of the Mental Hospital Survey Committee will be transferred from New York to Washington.

The change will be made in July to improve co-ordination of the committee's activities with those of the mental hygiene division. The former agency was formed in 1936 to survey as many as possible of the 356 public hospitals for the mentally ill in the United States and Canada.

Panama, U. S. May Make Legations Embassies

Panama, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Panama and the United States soon will raise the status of their diplomatic missions here and in Washington from legations to embassies, it was reported reliably tonight.

President Juan Demostenes Arosemena was said to have discussed the change with Secretary of State Cordell Hull when the latter was here en route home from the Lima conference.

Organization Seeks To Cut State Lines In Pursuing Rackets

As a result of the disclosures in the Warring tax conspiracy case, District, Maryland and Virginia officials gathered here yesterday to form an organization to fight racketeering. Here are the officials just before they entered the conference room (seated) E. P. Kirby, Commissioner McCoach, Maj. Brown, who will head the permanent law enforcement body, and Commissioner Hazen (standing), Paul Brown, Fairfax County Commonwealth attorney; Lawrence W. Douglas, Arlington County Commonwealth Attorney; Sheriff Howard Fields, of Arlington; James C. Christopher, acting State's attorney of Montgomery County; J. William Garrett, of Montgomery County; Armistead Boothe, city attorney of Alexandria, and Albert V. Bryan, Commonwealth attorney of Alexandria radio.

Warring

Those ordered to show cause why they should not be held guilty of contempt in the Warring case were Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell, attorneys for Emmitt Warring; Carl T. Denekas, juryman at the second Warring trial; Harry Fine, Warring henchman, and Thomas Quinlan, friend of Emmitt.

Deputy Makes Statement

The contempt charges against the two attorneys are based on a statement by John B. Upperman, suspended deputy marshal who has pleaded guilty to jury-tampering, that they gave him $110 in and after the first Warring income tax trial last fall, which resulted in dismissal when the jury deadlocked.

In a joint statement last night, the attorneys said the contempt order would give them "opportunity to vindicate our name and conduct." They said they were preparing answers to the charges.

"We are confident that the charges cannot be sustained," they said, "since they are without any foundation in fact."

The attorneys asked that judgment be reserved until they had had an opportunity to answer in court.

Predict Exoneration

"When this is done," they added, "we are certain that we will be completely exonerated and that the confidence reposed in us by hundreds of fellow-attorneys and prominent citizens, as communicated to us in the past two days, will have been completely justified."

Denekas admitted on the witness stand that he had been approached, first by Fine and later by Emmitt, a few days before the second Warring trial. Quinlan is charged with making an investigation to ascertain the qualifications of certain jurors.

Justice Department officials explained that any action taken by Murphy in the matter would be national and general in scope, and would be designed to raise personnel standards among United States deputy marshals.

Cummings Made Progress

Industrial progress along this line was made by former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings in the two years preciding his resignation, it was recalled. Salaries of deputy marshals were increased from $1,400 to $1,800 annually. All deputy marshals have been fingerprinted. This resulted in discovery of seven with criminal records. Scores of applicants for these jobs have been rejected through a vigorous system of investigation. A large number has been dismissed by running down complaints against them.

In view of what has been done, it is said, Murphy was surprised that such disclosures as those in the Warring case could occur.

Merit Bill Introduced

Since deputy marshal positions have long been political patronage jobs—beyond control of the United States marshal himself—the general feeling is that they will have to be taken out of politics and placed strictly under the merit system. This does not mean that present holders of these positions would be blanketed in.

In addition, minimum requirements as to education, physical fitness and other desirable qualifications are being considered.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, has introduced a bill to bring deputy marshals under civil service. This legislation may result in a fight, because of the patronage value of the jobs.

Hazen Called for Parley

The conference which resulted in the three-cornered law enforcement body was the result of a call sent out by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who is particularly desirous of crushing the numbers racket. He declared, after the meeting, that "racketeers had better leave these jurisdictions immediately."

Brown said he would call a meeting next month to discuss the six-point program.

Present were Lieut. Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner; Hazen, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, Gasch, Police Court Judge John P. McMahon, Traffic Director Van Duzer, M. O. Eldridge, assistant traffic director; Maj. Brown, Capt. Ira B. Keck, Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, Harry Underwood, Assistant United States District Attorney; J. William Garrett, chief of police, Montgomery County; James C. Christopher, acting State's attorney of Montgomery County; John P. Colpoys, United States Marshal; Lawrence W. Douglas, Commonwealth's attorney of Arlington County; Armistead Boothe, city attorney of Alexandria; Paul Brown, Commonwealth's attorney of Fairfax County; Howard B. Field, J. Kirby, sheriff of Fairfax County, and Albert V. Bryan, Commonwelath's attorney of Alexandria.

Dr. Brecht Dies From Gun Wound

Dr. Nelson D. Brecht, 59-year-old physician and notary public, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital two hours after he was found shot through the right temple, lying on the floor of his office in his home at 609 Twenty-second street northwest. A .32 caliber revolver was under his body.

Police said the man's wife, Mary Louise Brecht, told them her husband had been desponden' over ill health and had threatened several times "to end it all." An autopsy will be held today.

"PAYS MORE FOR IT THAN ANY OTHER TEN-CENT BEER on the MARKET"

NATIONAL Bohemian
BEER
Here's to the quality-minded tavern keeper and dealer who buys for you this truly wonderful beer—pays more for it than for any other ten-cent beer on the market—and sells it to you for a dime. He's your friend.
THE NATIONAL BREWING COMPANY

WELL, that's a fair question and deserves a fair answer. The fact is that the tavern keeper—the retailer in beer—is offered a great variety of beers to retail for a dime.

THESE beers vary in quality, like eggs vary in quality—like butter varies in quality—like coffee varies in quality. And, of course, they vary in price, too. Your tavern keeper—your dealer—can take his pick and select from a pretty wide price range. He can feature the finest beers and be content with a fair margin, or he can go in for "long shots" and make a larger profit per unit of sale.

AMONG all the ten-cent beers which your tavern keeper or dealer can buy, there is one outstanding beer which is the most expensive ten-cent beer on the market—costing your dealer more than any other beer. This beer is carried in stock by the quality-minded tavern keeper—the quality-minded dealer who is satisfied with a fair and honest margin of profit and who thinks first of all of satisfying YOU—giving you what he knows is the best—the costliest he can buy.

RIGHT here we want to compliment these quality-minded tavern keepers—these quality-minded retailers—and we commend them to you. You can rely upon such business men. They are quality-minded—they deserve your business and your support.

That's what we have in mind when we say in our advertising

Senators Favor D. C. Deciding Local Matters

Congress Shouldn't Pass on Minor Bills, Says King

By James D. Secrest.

The Senate District Committee yesterday indicated its willingness to transfer most of its legislative responsibility to the District Commissioners or a council as it gave its stamp of approval to ten local bills, at least one of which was so complicated that members admitted their inability to understand it.

"It's a shame Congress has to bother with such trivial matters," commented Chairman King, who has long urged a broadening of the powers of the Commissioners.

He referred to bills authorizing the reinstatement of two dismissed policemen and empowering the Commissioners to change the time for turning off and on the Capital's street lights.

Blames District People

Turning to Senator Capper, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the committee, King added:

"It's not our fault, though. You and I have wanted to give the Commissioners more power for years, but the people of the District would rather leave the authority in the hands of Congress."

The Griffenhagen suggestions for reorganizing the District government would relieve Congress of the duty of passing upon all such municipal ordinances as were acted upon by the committee.

The committee did not discuss the Overton fiscal formula proposal for stabilizing the Federal payment, but Chairman King referred the bill to its author, Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, for hearings. Overton said he will schedule an inquiry in the near future.

A half dozen other measures were referred to sub-committees, and a bill seeking to block construction of the Southwest motor vehicle inspection plant on a portion of the Southwest farmers' market site was reported adversely after District officials said the building is under construction.

Bills favorably reported provide for:

Amendment of District code to permit prosecution on a first degree count for any murder committed during perpetration of a felony.

Reinstatement in the Metropolitan Police Department of David R. Thompson and Ralph S. Warner with an amendment barring retroactive pay.

To Name Bridge for Sousa

Naming the new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge for John Philip Sousa, the "March King."

Limiting margin of error in gas meters to 2 per cent.

Reclassification of public school teachers doing research work.

Giving punitive powers to the Public Utilities Commission and the joint board of the commission and District Commissioners.

Changing licensing date for buses and taxicabs to March 1.

Amendment of teachers' retirement act to require designation of beneficiary.

Regulation of street lighting hours by the Commissioners.

Greater flexibility in the promotion of teachers in the schools.

Taxi Bill Referred

After Harry S. Wender, speaking for the Federation of Citizens Associations, had urged limitation of operators as well as taxicabs, Chairman King referred the bill to a sub-committee for hearings. Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, said that he had no objection to the amendment but believed the power to limit operators should rest with the Commissioners rather than the utilities body.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, challenged proponents of the bill with the repeated question: "What's the harm of having a lot of cabs?"

Wender replied that the large number of cabs in Washington had been brought about by finance companies intent upon selling automobiles at large profits to taxi operators, who are unable to earn a livelihood elsewhere.

Other bills referred to sub-committees were the Tydings measure to provide for refunding of special assessments, the King bill designed to protect certain banking transactions, the King bill to regulate professional engineering, amendments to the small loans act, and the proposal to transfer the recording of auto liens from the recorder of deeds to the department of vehicles and traffic.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

'Race of Life' Marks Dance Exhibition

Humphrey, Weidman Turn to Satire in Modern Program

Doris Humphrey and Charles Weidman, whose ideas of the dance are as new as this morning's paper, demonstrated their modern technique last night in Roosevelt High School auditorium.

But the proceedings were by no means as strenuous as such exhibitions can be, and sometimes are—that is, so far as the audience was concerned. There was as much humor to the entertainment as serious stuff. And one number, at least, "Race of Life," is as full of laughs as a two-page comic section.

In fact Miss Humphrey and Mr. Weidman went to the cartoonist of a leading magazine of wit, humor and satire for the story on which they based this selection. "Race of Life" was adapted from "a fantasy about an American Family," by James Thurber. Naturally it has to be seen to be appreciated, but if you know that choreography tells as much about the general dependence of males on their women as do Mr. Thurber's cartoons, you have the idea on which the humor is based.

The dancers were striking, too, on the serious side of their program. And their highly original conception of Bach's organ Passacaglia in C minor was probably the outstanding presentation. Since the music to which the artists danced is as abstract as a geometric truth, any appropriate dance would hardly be something to weave a simply story around. Certainly you can't speak about Miss Humphrey's choreography in concrete terms. What can be said is that Miss Humphrey, Jose Limon and other members of the group staged a pattern quite as colorful, dramatic (in an abstract way) and majestic as Bach did.

Miss Humphrey and Mr. Weidman appeared together in the opening number "To the Dance," music arranged by Norman Lloyd. Mr. Weidman, with Mr. Limon and George Bockman gave the program its best satirical moments in "Traditions," music by Lehman Engel—a number showing just how hard it is to break old habits, and how easy, once old ones collapse to fall into new ones. Two excerpts from Miss Humphrey's "New Dance," music by Wallingford Riegger, were also part of the program.

To all the artists in this ensemble the dance is not a matter of footwork, any more than of all other parts of the body. Heads, arms and torsos are as expressive as legs and feet. This, by itself, does not account for the troop's modernism, of course, but when you use them all, and coordinate all the movement, for the sake not only of the picture but for a definite idea as well, you may achieve something decidedly new—if you are good. And Miss Humphrey, Mr. Weidman, et al., are good.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Ballou to Hit Griffenhagen School Report

Critic of Proposed Setup Authorized To Make Reply

Firm in his declaration that the Griffenhagen education plan for the District is not to be compared with the present system, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools here, yesterday accepted from the Board of Education the task of preparing a report on the Griffenhagen findings for possible future consideration by Congress.

Dr. Ballou's immediate commission will be to present his report to the legislative committee of the Board of Education, which is authorized to take any action deemed necessary without reference to the board if lack of time forbids.

The school system in use here, Dr. Ballou told the board, obtains largely throughout the country. In accordance with it, a board of representative citizens formulates policy and a superintendent of schools does the actual managing, whereas the Griffenhagen report would make the school superintendent one of 17 department heads without direct responsibility to the community and take him from the important function of formulating educational requirements.

The board denied use of Central High School Auditorium for a musical recital by Marion Anderson, colored singer. The request was turned down on grounds that the presentation would be profit-making use of the auditorium and against the rules governing use of public buildings in the District.

Determined opposition was shown to this verdict by West A. Hamilton, board member.

The board granted use of the departmental auditorium for the annual convention May 16 and 17 of the District of Columbia Congress of the Parent-Teachers Association, the request that the National Symphony Orchestra be allowed to give neighborhood concerts during the next school year in certain high schools, and authorization for books used in public schools to be rebound by Washington firms instead of at Lorton Reformatory as has been the practice.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Katharine Cornell Plans New Spring Production

Seeks Leading Man for New Behrman Play; Annabella Is Grateful for Washington Visit; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

KATHARINE CORNELL, the actress-manager, whose current season's "Herod and Mariamne" proved to be one of her less auspicious ventures, still hopes to produce her new play, "No Time for Comedy," by S. N. Behrman, on Broadway this spring.

BELL

Casting difficulties have delayed this production more than any other single factor. In an effort to find the right leading man, both Miss Cornell and her director-husband, Guthrie McClintic, have been combing the available rosters of the theater both in this country and in Europe.

Robert Montgomery, at one time, was practically set to make his return to the stage in this play, but at the last minute Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer found it inexpedient to release him from his film contract for a sufficient length of time to make the excursion into the realm of the living theater feasible.

Others who have been mentioned for the part include Leslie Howard, Hugh Sinclair and Noel Coward. Any one of the three, in association with Miss Cornell, would be complete assurance of a box-office avalanche.

"No Time for Comedy," as was outlined to this writer by the author when he was here for the premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois"—Mr. Behrman is one of the charter members of the Playwrights' Producing Company, along with Maxwell Anderson, Robert E. Sherwood, Sidney Howard and Elmer Rice—is a modern play which makes use of only seven characters, but the parts are particularly demanding and difficult to fill.

In the event that the cast is complete before March 1, Miss Cornell and the Playwrights' Company, her associate producer, will present the play in New York about the middle of April.

It requires only a moment or two with Mr. Behrman to understand how he is able to write such brittle and brilliant comedy. He is not the sort who conveys the immediate impression that all funny fellows are tragedians at heart. He is an amusing conversationalist, whose remarks bristle with bon mots and occasionally even descend to the vagrant wisecrack. When he said last fall that his new play would be ready about the first of the year, he knew quite definitely what he was talking about. It was ready about the first of the year and has not come to public view solely for the reasons set forth above.

The Postman Pulls a "Boner"

Not so long ago we published an interesting and informative letter, ostensibly from John Garfield, which we frankly confessed we were not so naive as to believe had come to hand independently of the machinations of the Warner Brothers' publicity department in Burbank, Calif.

Mr. Garfield, you may recall, went on at some length—or somebody did—concerning the general news of Hollywood and the particular superiorities of "Juarez," starring Paul Muni, with Mr. Garfield, in the role of Porfirio Diaz, and Bette Davis, as Carlotta, in support. It was, as I say, all very interesting and very enlightening.

But the point is this. Yesterday there arrived another bulky letter from Burbank. It was signed by John Garfield—or was it? It was a verbatim repetition of the one that appeared here a week or so ago. Now I am awaiting the second copy of the one from Ann Sheridan.

And I am glad I was not such a sucker as to forget to preface the publication of the first letter from Mr. Garfield (?) with that "not so naive" business. I used to be a press agent myself!

Not all the mail arriving these past few days has been so bogus. There was, for example, that large flat container from the Twentieth Century-Fox lot in Hollywood. The handwriting was attractive, but strange to these aging eyes. Wrested from their cardboard backings, the contents proved to be one of the handsomest photographs of Annabella I ever have seen. It was graciously inscribed with expressions of the pleasure she had had in being among the stars present at the President's Birthday Celebrations—"I had a marvelous time and enjoyed every minute of it." The Annabella likeness is a gorgeous addition to a large collection and is greatly appreciated by one who didn't have the opportunity in a hectic week of becoming half well enough acquainted with the young French star who is more attractive and charming off the screen than she ever has been permitted to appear on.

Mr. Anger Revives Fragrant Memories

According to most eminent authorities on such matters, Negro spirituals and "swing" rhythms represent America's only distinctive contribution to the wealth of the world's music. These two strictly native elements of chromatic expression will be combined in novel fashion in Harry Anger's "Gentlemen, Be Seated" minstrel show to be presented in "streamlined" form on the stage of the Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow. In what manner and to what effect they will be blended remains to be seen.

But Mr. Anger, at least, deserves to be applauded for having had the courage to revive a form of American entertainment definitely indigenous to this country and long abandoned by the professional theater. To the old-timers among Washington theatergoers, minstrelsy, in whatever manifestation, will revive many fragrant memories.

It will recall the heyday of Lew Dockstader, George Primrose, George "Honey Boy" Evans, Neil O'Brien, Eddie Leonard and so many more that this column would not be able to contain their names.

It will recall, furthermore, that once upon a time, the late Raymond Hitchcock was impressed into service in the Cohan & Harris Minstrels to supplant "Honey Boy" Evans as one of the end men when the "Honey Boy" was stricken with appendicitis. Mr. Hitchcock, playing a "tough nigger" in the afterpiece, was asked the question, "You come from Memphis, don't you, fella?" to which he made the classic reply, "Well, suh, I was born in Memphis, but I come from musical comedy!"

To me, minstrelsy always recalls the fact that to this day Al Jolson warns all and sundry against me, when we are together, because "you have to look out for that guy, he goes back too far. He remembers me when I was doing a 'bit' in the olio with Lew Dockstader in 1908."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 15.—The tragedy of divided allegiance once again has struck the family of Mme. Schumann-Heinck. During the World War the late diva had four sons on the American side, one in Germany. The latter was killed in action—a son on the American side was killed during cavalry maneuvers.

HEDDA HOPPER

Now Ferdinand Schumann-Heinck, disabled American war veteran and Hollywood actor, has been engaged to play a role in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" for Warner Brothers, despite Hitler's threat which might affect a German sister still living in Berlin and married to a prominent surgeon.

He plays a purser on a German liner. Was last seen as a German ace in "Dawn Patrol" and good, too. Yes, his mother's spirit still carries on. Another studio is buying "The Last of the Titans," a story based on her life—another tough job for the casting department. There was a woman!

Lee Tracy's vacation this summer will cost him about $15,000. He has dropped a picture overboard in order to sail his boat, the 62-foot schooner Adore, to—a Honolulu yacht race, which starts from San Francisco July 4.

Dick Powell, another sailor who's nerts for the sea, goes along with Lee as second in command. Tracy came in sixth last year, but an astrologist predicted 1939 was his lucky year. Mrs. Tracy will clipper-ship over to greet him and I hope for congratulations.

"Husband, Wife and Friend" starts out in a blaze of glory. Warner Baxter has never been better than he is in the first few scenes, nor Loretta Young, Binnie Barnes, George Barbier and Gene Pallette. But when they start hurling that vulgar five-letter word, l-o-u-s-y, and continue doing it, confidentially, my opinion starts agreeing with the word! I thought we had scrapped those slapping scenes between the female of the species (who's more deadly than the male) and her mate—but find I was wrong. It is all in a spirit of fun, but much of it is just plain silly. I'd like to see the quartet of voices which doubles for the principals—they're wonderful!

Al Green told 'em off. All those girls working in a cafe scene who wore their nails like hawk talons after the kill had to work farthest from the camera. Gracie Allen, Judith Barrett and Ellen Drew came pink-nailed that day, and so escaped. It's men like that who make good soldiers.

After "Tarzan" is finished, Frank Whitbeck, the only elephant owner hereabouts, says that if he can't find more work for his pachyderms he'll have to have them refinanced. Big business!

'Tain't true that Jack Benny talked not-so-nice to wife Mary Livingstone, causing her to faint in the Brown Derby. For those who don't know, Mary has to be very careful about her heart.

Nat Pendleton threw a big night club party to celebrate the birthday of his 98-year-old grandmother.

Stars gifting the crew is not news, but when the crew puts out for the star, that's something else again. The "Union Pacific" crew presented Barbara Stanwyck with a crystal and silver tray, perfume bottles, a clock and other accessories, figuring she'd need gentle treatment after "Union Pacific."

The "engagement" story of Myrna Kennedy and Red Golden is a howl. They were whooping it up at the House of Murphy when Red announced to all that he and Myrna were skipping to Yuma any weekend now. Of course, the papers went for it. When the truth is, neither could afford a marriage even if they wanted it—which they don't. Myrna would lose that alimony from Busby Berkeley and Red can't afford a new wife, while still paying for the old.

Bob Hope was standing outside the Brown Derby with an agent. As three of the agent's best clients came out, he made scathing cracks about each one. "What's the matter with you?" asked Bob. "Don't you like those guys?" "Oh, they're okay. But it burns me up when I think of them taking 90 per cent of my salary."

Now, I wonder what really goes on in an agent's dream?

Now that Sam Goldwyn is going ahead with a story based on the recent Cavalier tragedy, and called "13 Go Flying" it might be well for him to get in touch with Jimmy Adams, of the British Air Force. He came here to buy planes and made a trip back East to get the details of that disaster for his government.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 15.

GUTHRIE McCLINTIC, the producer, has completed the foreword for the autobiography of his wife, Katharine Cornell . . . Mr. McClintic will describe the sentiments of a man who is wed to a Broadway star . . . and tell of the day when he finally persuaded Miss Cornell to become his bride. The next afternoon McClintic saw George Arliss and offered an affectionate greeting . . . Arliss paused to place his monocle in the proper place, stared coldly at the newlywed producer, and acknowledged: "Oh, yes—Katharine Cornell's husband."

ARRANGEMENTS are being completed for Massachusetts, Connecticut and Georgia to ratify the United States bill of rights next month . . . True Story magazine is seeking a debutante to write an article about Brenda Frazier . . . Former Police Commissioner Bolan, who testified at the Hines trial, was prevented, by the court's ruling, from telling how much rent he pays and how much his total assets are—as an indication that he never was bribed. Bolan's rent is $40 a month. His assets are $6,000 . . . Clifford Odets went to South America to complete his new play . . . Luise Rainer, who went to London last week, couldn't come to terms with Sidney Kingsley, regarding her appearance in his show. Luise insisted that she was not to receive star billing—because, she explained, she has no theatrical experience in America.

LAST WEEK the Welfare Association of the Magistrates' Courts—an organization devoted to rehabilitating New York's sidewalk Madonnas—held its annual theater party. The officials selected "The Primrose Path" as the play whose proceeds would be devoted to aiding the plight of unfortunate ladies of the evening . . . At the last minute, however, the plans were rearranged, and the members of the Welfare Association went, instead, to see "Mrs. O'Brien Entertains" . . . The committee had learned that "The Primrose Path" made light and merry with the exact type of problem women who had been intrusted to the Welfare Association of the Magistrates' Courts.

HAL ROACH will release Lewis Milestone's adaption of John Steinbeck's play, "Of Mice and Men," although Roach and Milestone have been suing each other . . . Mae West is heading for New York for a series of personal appearances . . . Attorney General Frank Murphy's first Civil Liberties Unit will be established in Chicago . . . Graeme Lorimer, who retired from the Curtis Publishing Co. one year ago—to devote his time to writing books—is returning to his old firm within the next few days . . . Frank Fay has leased the 44th Street Theater as well as the night club downstairs in that building for his new vaudeville enterprise. Fay's newest acquisition is Eva Le Gallienne, who will do the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet."

BERNIE Hyman, the M.-G.-M. producer, sat with Aldous Huxley, who had just completed writing the scenario of "Madame Curie" . . . Huxley began to discuss some of the scientific phenomena which he and his family had explored in their long years of research . . . Hyman listened to the foreign phrases and to descriptives relating to Man and his ills . . . "Come on, come on, Huxley," interrupted the impatient and movie-struck producer. "Get to the story-point."

ITALY'S ASSOCIATION of song writers finally has agreed to release Kurt Weill, the composer who is becoming an American citizen, from membership in its ranks. Weill, therefore, will join ASCAP here . . . Harry Richman will not return to the Road to Mandalay Club, which was erected in his honor, this season. After his Miami engagement, Richman will work at the Walton Roof in Philadelphia, at the highest salary ever paid a cafe entertainer in that city . . . John Longo, the anti-Haguer, who couldn't find a Jersey City restaurant in which to be tendered a party in celebration of his discharge from jail, now has the same difficulty here. Longo will charge that members of the New York police force have interfered with his obtaining a place of celebration.

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE has had difficulties with a number of fashionable clubs in New York, who kept posting his name for nonpayment of dues . . . The club officials always confused him with another Terhune—and the noted writer notified these organizations last year that he would resign from any club which made such an error again . . . This year Albert Payson Terhune was informed that his name will be listed in the Social Register—whose pages always had included a listing of the other Terhune responsible for the confusion. "All right," the writer agreed, "we'll try it once. But if there's any mistake in identity . . ." No such mistake will occur. For Ten Broeck Terhune was dropped—when he was sentenced to Sing Sing.

'Flying Irishman' Corrigan Title

"Flying Irishman" has been selected as the final title of the picture recently completed with Douglas Corrigan starring in the screen story of his own adventurous life.

The Pandro S. Berman production, which chronicles Corrigan's life from boyhood to the day he flew his ancient plane the "wrong way" to Ireland, was directed by Leigh Jason.

Little

Chalk up a third week for "Ballerina" at the Little Theater. As in many other cities, this French film has achieved something of a vogue in our town.

Photographed in the actual settings of the Paris opera, the film's appeal is not its unique background, as one might think, but instead the interesting study of a child. This part is played by one of the unknown members of the opera's student ballet, "Corps des Rats," Janine Charrat who makes of the wistful child a thoroughly credible figure. It is she who springs a trapdoor and cripples a new ballerina for life in a vain attempt to protect her favorite ballerina's position.

Mia Slavenska, premiere danseuse of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, and Yvette Chauvire, premiere danseuse of the National Opera at Paris, play the rival ballerinas and the opera's ballet appears in several performances on the stage of the famous theater. The music is from Gounod and Chopin and played by the opera's orchestra. But its theme of childhood, as in Director Jean Benoit-Levy's earlier "La Maternelle," makes it the sustained and delicate film that it is.

Theater Week Offers New and Old Attractions

For its fifth Washington engagement "Tobacco Road" will open at the National Theater for the week beginning next Monday evening. Jeeter Lester and his fellow "crackers" of the Georgia back country have cropped up in all but ten States of the Union, four of which are already on the definite booking lists of the John Barton company we are to see next week. Besides Mr. Barton, an American actor whose widest reputation, before he took up the role of Jeeter, was on the English stage, the cast will also include Sara Perry, Patricia Quinn, Norman Budd, William Dorme, Dick Lee, Lillian Ardell, Alan Jason, Walter Ayers, Sheila Brent and Eugenia Wilson. There will be the usual Wednesday nad Saturday matinees.

"Let Us Live" will bring Henry Fonda, Maureen O'Sullivan and Ralph Bellamy as its featured players to the screen of the Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow. It is a drama of an average American boy and girl caught in a strain of happenings that very nearly brings about their downfall. Alan Baxter, Stanley Ridges and Henry Kolker head the supporting cast which was directed by John Brahm. "Gentlemen, Be Seated," is the streamlined minstrel show that will be the Earle's stage attraction for the next week. Gus Van, famed as the first half of Van and Schenck, will be the interlocutor, and others on the line will be John (Sassafras) Welch and Emil (Jellyroll) Casper; Lewis and Van; the Ambassadors; Ames, Royce and Miller, and the Earle Roxyettes. "Lincoln in the White House" will be the special short feature.

With music by Hoagy Carmichael, Sam Coslow and Leo Robin, "St. Louis Blues" will be the new film at the Capitol Theater beginning tomorrow. Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar, Maxine Sullivan and Mary "Punkins" Parker will do the emoting and chanting in the film for which even Director Raoul Walsh contributed the lyrics for one of the songs, "Let's Dream in the Moonlight." Mitzi Green, a recent visitor for the President's Birthday Ball, will be back as the star of the Capitol's stage revue, "Stars Over Broadway," in which Count Berni Vici presents a company of 60 and an elaborate production of 22 scenes. Vici will offer his 16 Hollywood Ingenues; Lane and Lane; Gene Gory and company; LaRue and Carol, Terry Howard, Bill Guthrie and Lenore O'Neil, swing organist.

"Idiot's Delight" is being held over for a second week at the Palace Theater beginning this morning. This is Robert E. Sherwood's screen adaptation of his own Pulitzer Prize play on the effect of war on the little people who have nothing to do with its causes. Norma Shearer and Clark Gable play the parts created on the stage by Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt. Others in the cast are Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Burgess Meredith, Joseph Schildkraut, Laure Hope Crews and Paula Stone.

Humphrey Bogart plays his first starring role in "King of the Underworld," which opens tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater. Needless to say, in common with his most recent parts in "Angels With Dirty Faces" and "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," Bogart will play a gangster, and opposite him Kay Francis will appear as a woman doctor. James Stephenson, John Eldredge and Jessie Busley head the supporting company which Lewis Seiler directed from a story by W. H. Burnett.

For a third week "Gunga Din" will remain at RKO-Keith's Theater. With Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in the leading parts, this story of India was written by Ben Hecht and Charles McArthur as a screen version of the Rudyard Kipling poem. Sam Jaffe, remembered for his Grand Llama in "Lost Horizon," has the title role and others in the cast are Joan Fontaine, Eduardo Ciannelli, Montague Love, Lumsden Hare and Abner Biberman.

It is a repeat engagement for "Honolulu," the film musical that stars Eleanor Powell, whose recent appearance in our town won her many admirers; the Columbia Theater will offer this comedy of double identity tomorrow. Robert Young has a dual role and Burns and Allen handle the comedy situations. Miss Powell does a hula, a Bill Robinson impression and a rope-skipping dance. Short subjects and news events are also on the bill.

"Dark Rapture" will remain at the Belasco Theater until the middle of next week at least. This is the film made in the Belgian Congo at the request of the King of the Belgians by Mr. and Mrs. Armand Denis (Leila Roosevelt). An authentic record of the fast-fading tribes in the center of Africa, this film has created much interest wherever it has played.

Thirty-five minutes of world news will be the central bill-of-fare at the Trans-Lux as usual next week, but there will be four first-run short subjects on the supporting program: "Fishing in the Fjords," a travelog about the northwestern coast of Norway; "Stranger Than Fiction," a sequence of odd facts in life and nature; "Peaceful Neighbors," a color cartoon of barnyard fowl, caricaturing contemporary European celebrities, and "California Today."

Amy Fong, the Chinese player, is the particular bright star in the new burlesque production coming to the Gayety, "Oriental Girl." George Murray will be the leading comedian and Carl Mylie will head the supporting cast. As usual the piece will feature a large company of girls and will open on Sunday afternoon.

Goering Drafts Labor to Widen Kiel Canal

Manpower Decree to Aid Building of Big Public Works

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 15.—A new decree by Marshal Goering today made it possible to draft any needed manpower for gigantic national construction jobs such as widening the Kiel Canal and at the same time effectively called a halt to employers' competing for labor by offering higher wages.

Goering also ended the government's costly experiment of paying men drafted for unskilled ditch-digging the same wages they previously drew for their jobs as artisans or brain-workers.

Goering's decree, published on the same day that plans for widening of the famous Kiel Canal connecting the Baltic with the North Sea were announced, began with the significant words:

"The execution of unpostponeable tasks having special significance for the policies of the State must not be endangered through lack of labor power.

"For the performance of such tasks the possibility must exist of drafting inhabitants of the Reich's territory for work and of making firmer ties which bind workers to a given place of work."

The decree superseded a milder one of last June 23, effective last July 1, under which all Germans became liable for temporary service to the state. The new decree enables the government to draft labor for indefinite periods.

Widening of the Kiel Canal "to make possible parallel traffic of the largest types of ships" was announced as one of the "urgent" projects of the nation.

Canal Was Widened

It was built from 1887 to 1895 and widened from 1907 to 1914. Under the Nazi regime the whirlwind construction of western fortifications showed that tasks of such kind can be performed more quickly.

The state merely drafts the necessary men from government offices, industrial plants and business firms, and all energies of the nation are concentrated upon a particular task to which orders of Goering or Reichsfuehrer Hitler gives precedence.

It was generally assumed that the widened canal would be ready by the time the 35,000-ton battleship Bismarck — launched yesterday — would be commissioned two years from now.

Collect From Jews

Berlin, Feb. 15 (AP).—The Nazi government collected the second installment of a billion-mark ($400,000,000) fine against Jews today and took steps to collect from the present owners of former Jewish business properties a share of any "profits" realized in the transfer of such businesses.

A decree was issued today supplementing the December 5, 1938, order for the "Aryanization" of German economic life, and providing for the payment of 70 per cent of the "Aryanization" profits to the German treasury and, in the case of real estate, up to 100 per cent.

Just what portion of the 250,000,000 marks ($100,000,000) installment due today was paid could not be determined. Two more installments are due May 15 and August 15.

With the assets of many wealthy Jews already impounded, the process of paying today's portion of the fine was largely a matter of transferring the money from banks to the government.

drid-Barcelona peoples' tribunals, and an insurgent firing squad.

Barriobero was sentenced to death last night, the first to receive surgent conquerors of Barcelona.

Those on Trial

Those who went on trial today were charged with high revolutionary crimes. They were:

Emilio Ventura, a president of the government peoples' court; Manuel Garrido, president of the first revolutionary committee organized in the assembly plant of General Motors in Barcelona after workers "collectivized" and took control of that establishment; Emilio Morales, president of a revolutionary syndicate; Guillermo Bodo, accused of being an assassin and gunman; Pablo Verdad, chief of one of Barcelona's "patrols" exercising its own police power, and Francisco Piquer, anarchist accused of murdering five priests.

Barriobero was charged with forming "revolutionary" military tribunals in Barcelona which his accusers said sentenced to death hundreds of insurgent sympathizers in the early days of the war.

Paris, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Premier Negrin of Loyalist Spain was reported tonight to have offered to resign if a moderate republican could be found willing to take over the government for the purpose of facilitating peace conversations.

Mystery Plane Pilot 'Loafed' At 420 M. P. H.

Kelsey

when he finished his cross-country journey.

The Air Corps officer said he left March Field, Calif., at 9:07 (E. S. T.) and arrived at Mitchel Field, N. Y., at 4:50 (E. S. T.) with stop-offs at Amarillo, Tex. and Dayton, Ohio, of 20 minutes and 25 minutes. West of St. Louis, he said, he reached a speed of 400 miles an hour, and coming over Pittsburg hit 420 miles an hour with the aid of a slight tail wind.

The trip across the country was without incident, Kelsey said. Flying most of the time at 18,000 to 20,000 feet, he had perfect weather all the way.

Asked how it felt to go 7 miles a minute, Lieut. Kelsey said that flying at 20,000 feet, it seemed no faster than doing 150 miles an hour at a few thousand feet.

"There was some kick to it," he admitted, "but I can't say it made my hair stand on end."

While reluctant to speak of the new plane, the Army's answer to the new high-speed bombers, Lieut. Kelsey emphasized that it possessed full military characteristics. He said nothing had been skimped in the intreest of speed, and that it was equipped with safety gear, landing equipment and other military installations.

Guardedly praising the new Lockheed as an "outstanding development," Lieut. Kelsey said he looked forward to a better plane within a year. The young officer, ten years out of Boston Tech and the Army Flying School, is not a test pilot, but is project engineer in charge of pursuit plane development at Wright Field, Ohio. He was to leave Washington this morning to return to work on seven other pursuit jobs.

Kelsey said he did not want to get into an argument with the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics experts who hold that the limit of airplane speed is something oved 500 miles an hour, but he felt greater speeds would come.

"The one thing to learn in this funny business," he declared, "is to be skeptical of all limits and rules."

Argentina to Slash Imports From U. S. 40%; Step Held Move to Force Trade Concessions

Announcement yesterday by Pedro Groppo, Argentine Minister of finance, that imports from the United States would be curtailed 40 per cent was interpreted in informed quarters here as an effort to wring trade concessions from this country.

At the same time, informed sources ridiculed the idea that any deep-seated political motive—such as a leaning by the Argentine toward Fascism—was behind the move.

The Argentine, it is explained by these sources, is probably the No. 1 "rugged individualist" among nations, and doesn't care 'two whoops" about the totalitarian states, or the democracies for that matter, so far as political doctrines go. Its sole concern is to advance its trade interests, which constitute the head and front of its economy.

Since the Argentine sells 80 per cent of its produce to European countries, experts point out, naturally it has taken care not to alienate its customers. Its chief trade tie-up is with England, which takes all of its chilled beef. In fact, these two countries are dependent on each other to a considerable extent. If England did not get Argentine beef, its population might have to go hungry.

The slash in imports from the United States, official quarters said last night, may result in a revival of efforts to secure Senate approval of the pending sanitary convention which would permit the Argentine to sell beef in this country.

Failure of the Senate, due to pressure from the Western cattle growing States, to ratify this convention, was held by trade experts to be one of the principal obstacles to American efforts to get a greater share of the Argentine market.

President Roosevelt has urged the Senate to ratify this pact. The cattle growing States argue, however, that presence of disease among some of the Argentine beef herds justifies exclusion of all beef from that country. The convention would permit imports from grazing areas unaffected by disease.

Senate Unit Backs Nominations to Air, Maritime Boards

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday approved 11 appointments by President Roosevelt to aviation and maritime boards and sent them to the Senate for expected confirmation.

Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, said serious charges that had been lodged against some of the appointees were unfounded.

Those approved were:

Clinton M. Hester, of Montana, as administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the following as members; Edward J. Noble, of Connecticut, to serve through 1940; Harllee Branch, of Georgia, to serve through 1944; Robert H. Hinckley, of Utah, through 1943; Oswald Ryan, Indiana, through 1942; and C. Grant Mason, jr., District of Columbia, through 1941.

Maritime labor board appointments were Robert W. Bruen New York; Louis Bloch, California, and Claude E. Seehorn, Colorado, all to serve until June 22, 1941.

Appointment of Sumpter Smith, of Alabama, as one of the three members of a special air safety board was approved subject to favorable action by the Alabama Senators, Bankhead and Hill, both Democrats. Other members of the safety board approved were Thomas O. Hardin, Texas, and C. B. Allen, West Virginia.

Sabotaging Parole

Chairman Jelleff has chosen an appropriate moment to protest against the neglect to which the District Parole Board is subjected. The public is aroused by the Warring jury-tampering scandal to an appreciation of the importance of effective crime prevention work. Moreover, the hamstringing of the parole board gives added point to the current move for reorganization of the District government.

For many years the board has pleaded for adequate funds to make possible effective administration of the parole law. But only minor improvements have been made. As Mr. Jelleff candidly admits, the board is "doing a poor job." That is inevitable when field officers have to look after 140 to 150 cases each. Supervision of released prisoners under these circumstances means virtually no supervision at all. It is not surprising that the board feels itself justified in disclaiming responsibility for any crime that may result from this gross neglect.

A real municipal government in the District would have to face up to this issue. At present it is evaded because responsibility for sabotaging the parole system may be divided among the Commissioners, the Budget Bureau and the two houses of Congress. Under these circumstances officials of the board naturally appeal to public opinion for support. But even this procedure, as many agencies of the local government have learned, may work to their disadvantage when their budget reaches the committees of Congress.

Even if it were possible to ignore the present law-enforcement crisis in the District, the plight of the parole board would still cry for an effective overhauling of the makeshift governmental machinery from which its difficulties stem.

Payment Deferred

Mexico's No. 1 problem is, and for a long time has been, the problem of efficient land utilization. The overwhelming majority of that nation's population belong to the land. But the land has belonged to only a small minority of that population.

It is to the credit of Lazaro Cardenas that more than any other Mexican President he has sought to carry out a program of land reform that would give the peons a real interest in production. For this he deserves much praise. Americans certainly will not begrudge him the honor that is his due. But Americans have every reason to expect that when land reforms are carried out at their expense full compensation should be made to them.

This certainly has not been the rule with regard to case after case of expropriation of American properties in recent years. Oil and land properties have been taken from Americans with little if any prospect of indemnification. To be sure, the Mexican government did, some little while ago, agree to pay $10,000,000 over a period of years by way of compensation for agricultural properties belonging to Americans that the Mexican government had taken over. But it took a long time before Mexico came around to performing even this elementary act of justice. Since then, the process of expropriation, without adequate compensation, has shown no signs of slowing up.

During the past week, for instance, some 50,000 acres of American-owned sugar land in the State of Sinaloa have been taken from the original owners and distributed among peasants as collective farms. Whether that will benefit the peons whom the government has seen fit to favor remains to be seen. Division of the land in Mexico as elsewhere has not always worked to the advantage of the presumed beneficiaries. But whether it does or not, it is obvious that those who have owned and developed the property had been deprived of their holdings without due compensation.

At a moment when there is renewed talk of a compromise on the oil issue, the seizure of the sugar lands is not a hopeful augury for a Mexican-American settlement. The United States, unquestionably wants to live on terms of good neighborliness with the republic below the Rio Grande. It has given many concrete indications of this intent. But if the United States is to continue to be a good neighbor to Mexico, Mexico, in turn, must begin being a good neighbor to the United States. So far she has pursued such a policy only in the breach.

Facing Up To Economy

In a special message sent to Congress on February 7, President Roosevelt asked for an additional WPA supplementary appropriation of $150,000,000, designed to offset the cut of that amount ordered by the legislature after a long and careful study of the relief picture.

Both House and Senate have reacted unfavorably to this extraordinary request, which directly challenges Congressional control over the purse strings. There is, however, a suggestion that the issue might be compromised by cutting an average of $15,000,000 from each of the ten major appropriation bills, the total saving thus secured to be granted the WPA as the President suggests. The argument is that this would placate the economy advocates while at the same time averting any curtailment of the relief rolls.

This compromise suggestion is completely inadmissible. In the first place it is not to be assumed that departmental appropriations are drawn so loosely that a total of $150,000,000 can be cut from them without serious injury to vital governmental services. And even if the sum could be made available in this way it should go to reduce the deficit. Most decidedly it ought not to be turned over to WPA as the President requests.

That the WPA is run on an absurdly extravagant and inefficient basis is common knowledge. And it was primarily to force better management on the organization that Congress trimmed the $875,000,000 supplemental appropriation requested for the next five months. Bitter experience shows that the WPA will continue to squander money, and pile up deficits, until it is forced to count its dollars a little more carefully. Cutting the appropriation is the only certain way to secure some measure of frugality and good management.

Assertions that economies will have to be made at the expense of downright suffering for the unemployed are unfortunately to be expected. They will doubtless continue to be made, for the Works Progress Administration, like any other agency, is naturally indisposed to confront the painful task of curtailing lavish practices which have become habitual. But if Congress maintains the pressure the WPA will, reluctantly, begin to set its house in order.

Possibly this employment-creating agency will even take steps to see that married couples, together drawing fat salaries, are not permitted to continue on its administrative staff. Whatever may be said about this practice as a general principle, it is clearly absurd that it should be allowed in an agency designed to spread employment widely. And this is only one of many directions in which the WPA can economize, without curtailment of essential relief, if it is compelled to do so.

But the compulsion will not be there, and squandering will continue, unless Congress continues the pressure it has at last begun to apply. As President Roosevelt himself pointed out, in his message of January 9, a balanced budget will remain an unattainable idea until the Legislature forces economies upon the spending agencies. "The Congress," said Mr. Roosevelt, "will have to accept the responsibility for such reduction; and the Congress will have to determine which activities are to be reduced."

In putting some restraints on financial profligacy, Congress, as the appropriating branch of the Government, is doing its duty precisely as outlined by the President. It must not be seduced from the performance of this duty. And, fortunately for the Nation, the indications are that it will not be.

A Shift In Hungary

From the moment of his appointment to the premiership of Hungary, in May, 1938, Bela Imredi found himself forced to fight a rearguard action against Nazi ideology, threatening the Magyar kingdom both from within and without.

Imredi's plan was to fight fire with fire. The Hungarian Nazis have for some time sought to capitalize peasant dissatisfaction by urging partitioning of the big estates. They have also appealed to the impoverished Magyar middle class by demanding anti-Semitic legislation to improve the lot of those not subject to this discrimination. So Imredi sponsored measures designed to restrict the activities of Jews in business and the professions while, at the same time, holding out to the peasants the promise of land reform.

The original anti-Semitic measures sponsored by the Imredi regime were relatively moderate. But when the expected cure did not take place, the premier found himself forced to increase the dose. Legislation now up before the Budapest Parliament would bring Hungary only a step behind Germany and Italy in the oppression of Jewish citizens.

This program did not end the clamor of the Nazis. But it did arouse the opposition of more liberal elements in the kingdom. At the same time the great Magyar landowners, who are the dominant force in the Budapest Parliament, viewed with disfavor the plan to cut up the big estates. These elements, plus those which feared that Imredi's ostentatiously pro-German foreign policy would sap Hungary's independence, made it impossible for Imredi to continue. The discovery by the premier of a Jewish great-grandmother was undoubtedly the excuse rather than the reason for his resignation.

It is not yet clear who will take Imredi's place. Should it be, as rumored, the noted geographer, Count Paul Teleki, it would probably mean that Regent Horthy has decided on at least a partial about-face from the Imredi program. In any event, Hungary finds herself today in a difficult and unenviable position. The irony of it is that while the smashing of the status quo by Germany made it possible for Hungary to regain some of her lost territory, this same event has also increased her internal difficulties and made her independence less secure.

The Refugee Plan

The refugee plan which the Evian Intergovernmental Committee now has under consideration is Germany's modest contribution toward a solution of the grave problem she herself created. If it does not err on the side of generosity, it does nevertheless make possible, given international backing, the orderly and systematic emigration from the Third Reich of around 150,000 Jews during the next few years.

These unfortunates will be permitted to take out of Germany their personal belongings, but no cash. They will thus find themselves in their new homes with no reserves of capital which they can draw on during the period of readjustment. If orderly emigration is to be facilitated, it is thus peremptory that funds be made available to permit Jewish resettlement.

It is with this problem that the Evian committee is now grappling. With its blessing, a huge corporation will be formed to raise the necessary funds. Already the British government is understood to have pledged $25,000,000. Other governments, possibly including our own, may contribute their share either in the form of an outright grant or in the form of a loan. Presumably the balance of the minimum of $100,000,000 which is the estimated need will be raised by private donations.

The financial aspect of the refugee problem is, however, one side of the picture. It is not only necessary to find the money needed to reestablish the refugees in new homes, it is also necessary to find such homes. Here again those nations which have manifested abhorrence for what has happened in the Third Reich, and sympathy for the victims of Nazi persecution, have opportunity to demonstrate sympathy in concrete form.

Spread over a period of years, it should not be difficult to find places for the 150,000 Jews whose emigration Germany now shows a willingness to facilitate. Failure to make possible the successful execution of the current refugee plan would be a blot on civilization and leave the democratic countries, in particular, open to the charge of shedding crocodile tears.

FDIC To The Rescue

The failure of the second largest bank in Jersey City produced no public excitement. According to reports small groups gathered, read the notices posted on closed doors and passed quietly on. One can readily imagine the scenes of disorder that would have been enacted before those closed doors prior to the introduction of deposit insurance.

That is the bright side of the picture, showing how Federal insurance of bank deposits has safeguarded depositors against losses from bank failures. In allaying alarm over the safety of deposits, moreover, disastrous bank runs are avoided and sound institutions are protected against unjustified public distrust.

Against these obvious advantages, this or any other bank failure should emphasize the fact that deposit insurance is a palliative, not a remedy, for those fundamental weaknesses of our unit banking system that have in the past produced an abundant crop of failures in good years as well as in periods of depression.

Up to the end of 1938 the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation had paid out only $76,000,000 to depositors of insolvent banks and it expected to recover about 70 per cent of that expenditure. That is a very good record. But this one Jersey City bank failure may entail a heavy outlay, estimated as high as $18,000,000.

As insured deposits in the country's banks amount to many billions of dollars, distributed among some 13,700 institutions, it is plain that the safety of our banking system depends in final analysis upon the maintenance of a sound and solvent banking system. The FDIC fully appreciates that fact and has labored to eliminate or stregthen the weakest institutions in conformity with the obvious fact that insurance is a palliative and not a safeguard.

A letter-writer to the New York Sun says the trouble with this country is that it pays too much attention to pogonotomy and too little to pogonotrophy. We wish we knew what he's talking about so we could worry about it for a while.

Many fear that by the time the taxpayer pays for preparations for war, he won't have enough left to be worth fighting for.

Power Usurped

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Virginia, the Mother of States, has been dressed in a robe of sackcloth and ashes. As a citizen and voter of the Old Dominion (one among many) we hired a couple of servants to represent us in the upper house in Washington. . . . Well, it seems as if these two servants, after being given the very dignified title of Senator, failed to count 25 when they felt the halter draw. . . . In a mood of anger they apparently forgot all about representing the people of their State. The angry mood was brought about by President Roosevelt nominating Judge Roberts for a Federal judgeship.

Not since the days of "the kingfish" has the Senate so brazenly usurped the Chief Executive's constitutional rights. By its vote, the Senate has demanded the whole say in nominating and confirming our Federal judges.

It is no longer a question, as some writers would have us believe, that Article 2, Sec. 2, Par. 2, of our Constitution, was a compromise proposition. Certainly, the question was debated by the delegates in the constitutional convention, as to who should have the appointment of Federal officers. The question was settled when the Constitution was finally adopted. So that argument, by those who would try to excuse Senators Glass and Byrd, is a dead cat.

"Personally offensive and obnoxious" is bound to figure in Virginia's political life, and the State's political set-up will be guided by the boomerang. GEO. DENT.

The Death Of Pope Pius XI

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not even the presence of the Angel of Death can restrain Nazi leaders from pouring forth their venom on those they hate. Thus when the Holy Father passed to his Maker and the whole world realized with a sudden shock that one of the mainstays of peace had been taken from us, Herr Joseph Goebbels, Nazi propaganda minister, sneered at the dead Pope, calling him "a political adventurer" and other unspeakable epithets. In the past Goebbels has often displayed his intemperate vocabulary with reference to the Holy Father and Catholic clergy, but it was fully expected by those who study the German press that he would be shamed into silence by death. It is true that officially the German foreign office expressed its regrets to the Vatican, but that was for foreign consumption only. At home German Catholics heard the usual Nazi insults.

The reasons for this apparently inconsistent policy are not far to seek. The Nazi press cannot eulogize the dead Pius XI without admitting that all the atrocious attacks they made upon him while he yet lived were as baseless as they were vile. It must be remembered the Pope and all things Catholic were attacked in the first place for a purpose; and that purpose yet remains to be fulfilled.

This purpose is nothing less than the destruction of Catholicism in Germany and throughout Central Europe. Why? The papacy must inevitably stand firm for peace. The Catholic Church is an international influence. It is merciful. It is Christian. Now peace, internationalism mercy and Christianity are necessarily ingratae to Nazis. These four abstractions can spell Nazi destruction if they are given free rein among the German people. There can be no armistice in the struggle against them. And most of all, the Catholic monastic institutions have built up considerable wealth during their centuries of existence. This wealth the Nazis need, and intend to get. "After the Jews the Catholics." And though burning sorrow has finally burst his stout heart, Pius XI can still find no appeasement in the relentless Nazi press.

IMO PECTORE.

Washington, Feb. 13

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Pope Pius XI, supreme leader of the Roman Catholic Church, faced eternity today. He met death with that calmness of spirit endowed men of peace and good will. Doubtless he left this troublous world murmuring his obedient prayer unto Jesus Christ, Saviour of all mankind. Only God and Lord Jesus knew his destiny. Only God and His beloved Son Jesus could pronounce a perfect judgment on the works of the Pope, who was revered and exalted by all his Catholic followers.

Pope Pius XI steadily gained the admiration of men regardless of creeds. He promoted peace midst turmoil and war. He inspired Catholic youth to seek goodness. He influenced men to foster righteousness by prayer. He triumphed over seemingly unsurmountable difficulties by means of his faith. He evoked the spirit of God for salvation through Virgin Mary and the saints. His leadership won an increased membership to the Catholic Church. His sterling qualities will be long remembered among men.

May God and His Son Jesus Christ lift up the soul of Pope Pius XI. It is not for mortal men to judge what constitutes a true religion, since the kingdom of heaven is within the reach of everyone, but we know that God is the only giver of immortality, even as we believe Christ Jesus and God are one in Spirit. Truth, Love, Life and infinite Power. Pope Pius XI only lived his share of this life, and may the Lord bless him unto life everlasting.

SYLVESTER SATURDAY.

Glenn Dale, Md., Feb. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Old Testament says: "When the Lord is aroused by the sins of his people He recalls His great leaders." The recall of His Holiness Pope Pius XI is a great loss to the people of the world regardless of their faith. His Holiness was not only a father and shepherd to his flock, but also extended his great sympathy and aid for human sufferings.

We can all see that even the Holy Pontiff cannot carry any of worldly goods along with him, nor can any of his loyal servants and friends accompany him beyond. He must go alone, but He saw to it that he shall arrive in the same splendor there as he did amongst us. His Holiness has stored up a great wealth of good deeds, and one cannot find their equal here. He will face Our Lord with a great army of accomplishments for the suffering human race.

His patience and wisdom to bring back into the flock the stranded sheep, who joined the wolves to help them bleed the rest of the flock, will be unforgettable. May he be our good spokesman before the Almighty. May the Lord overlook our sins and spare us any more losses of good sincere leaders, as well as disarm our enemies, as He did the Egyptians and Romans when they wanted to destroy the minorities and religions of their times. But we must do our share and help Our Lord along by keeping our faith in Him and following the Ten Commandments, which have so far proven our only salvation and liberty.

The Story of Key

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just written a short story of Francis Scott Key and "The Star Spangled Banner," the conclusion of which I write here, because some of its lines, I think, have bearing upon the situation today, in this country and in the world at large. I believe that my story, which was universally told in my boyhood, is the true account, although it differs in detail from the historians. I first got my story from my grandfather and my great-uncle, both of whom served as officers in the War of 1812, and should have known the truth of the matter.

At the close of the story I tell how Key strode the deck and watched and waited for flecting glimpses of the Flag; how the Flag kept faith and waved its answering call back to him who watched:

Some are gone whose spirits live.
Their lives were not in vain;
Some wrote a line, some carved a stone,
Some soothed another's pain;
Some stoutly stood with manly front,
To shield the weak from wrong;
Some built a frontier church to God;
Some cheered the world with song.
Not least of these was Maryland's son;
All heedless of British brag,
His poet soul inspired by faith
Immortalized the Flag.
Twin offspring of the land we love,
Who sees the banner wave,
But thinks of him who watched 'till dawn,
Who added lustre gave
To every star that gems its field,
To every stripe that gleams,
And offers silent thanks to him,
Who deathless, sleeps and dreams,
Dreams still, the Banner waves its call,
To manhood far and near.
As in that night when bursting bomb,
Revealed the Flag still there;
Dreams still its stainless, silken folds
Wave o'er the brave and free,
Who pledge their fealty to the Flag,
A passing thought to Key.

Police Preparedness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent issue of The Post (February 9, page 17, column 6) carried a news item that the Metropolitan Police were, upon orders from Maj. Brown, being given secret drills in riot tactics and in the use of tear and nausea gases. All these preparations, your paper stated, were being taken for "possible demonstrations protesting the recent slash in WPA funds."

During the past six years Washington has seen many parades of the sort for which the police are now preparing to attack, and without exception all of these parades have been peacefully conducted. The demonstrators marched, listened to a few speeches and returned to their homes. WILLIAM V. GEORGE.

'The Whole Story'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Lindley, in his article, "The Roberts Case," in The Post, February 12, hits the nail square on the head when he refers to "an overdose of constitutional bunkum," though perhaps unintentionally.

Boiled down to hard fact, Judge Roberts unfortunately happened to be merely a pawn, and the essence of the matter is, the groundwork was being laid for the hoped-for political purge in the Old Dominion next year, similar to that attempted in Georgia, Maryland and South Carolina last year, and the President got badly beaten at his own game. Stripped of all verbiage, that's the whole story.

Guppy And Up

THE LATE Lechmere Guppy, Esq., of Trinidad, B. W. I., started it all, and I dare say he's revolving in his honorable grave. Way back about 1860 he came upon some strange little fish in his island ponds and snipped them off to the British Museum for identification. That was the hatching of the first germ that has since laid low a good many of us. Willard Huntington Wright, alias S. S. Van Dine, was himself a sufferer when he wrote that "the breeding and raising of tropical fish is . . . a virulent disease."

It was only this Christmas that the guppy swam into my ken. If I had met the creature anywhere socially, it was no more than enough to make me vaguely aware, say as one is aware of the capital of Liberia, that the guppy is about an inch long, that procreation is the guppy's forte, and that Mme. Guppy bears her young alive and wriggling.

The facts were to come home to me.

My wife, on the twenty-fourth, had invented from a clear sky the notion of buying for my stocking a plain glass bowl containing water, a sprig of seaweed, one male guppy, and one female guppy who may be described as having been in an interesting condition. Just how interesting was not fully gathered by my wife as she wrapped the whole thing up in gilt paper on Christmas Eve. It was quite clear next morning, however, when I took off the wrappings. Six little guppies now swam along with papa and mama. You have to look close to see an eighth of an inch of complete fish.

Now had I left things at that, all might have been well. As apartment pets the guppies were exemplary; they made no muddy tracks on the floor and woke nobody up in the night. My wife said she liked them. But it turned out that I was the one who began to keep unseemly hours, and make large, splashy tracks on the kitchen floor, and what she said of that had a different tone.

The chain of development was simple. My guppies, I imagined, might like company, so I went to the tropical fish store and bought more guppies. That, of course, meant a new and larger bowl. But once I had this, why not make it a properly "balanced" aquarium? So into the kitchen, where the bowl snuggled with the coil-thing on the refrigerator, came two pounds of sand and a sheaf of water plants that looked like leeks but didn't, for I gave them a try, taste the same at all. You wouldn't think there was any art in setting out plants under water, but when the people downstairs complained of the drizzle through the ceiling I concluded I needed practice with me and the bowl at ease in the bathtub.

Finally the thing was done, and for about three days I was very proud of the new arrangement. Then, you know how it goes, I thought I would just touch up my collection by adding half a dozen snails. Peaceful fellows, snails, but they were my real undoing. For I went once too often to the fish store a yearning for new breeds of fish swept over me, and when I came home with two pink little inch-long fish named Rosy Tetras, and two even smaller fish all black and white horizontal stripes named Zebras, the game was up.

Oh, they got along with the guppies, right enough. They were all very polite to each other, even when they had collisions. One doesn't often see two fish scraping fenders and getting out to look things over and exchange license cards But my fish did. That bowl was like the Baltimore pike on Saturday night.

Who was I to deny the little things steering room? My sentiment was cheeringly praised by the man at the fish store, and he no sooner sold me what he called a five-gallon tank, and told me how many fish per gallon were congenial, than the heart in me leaped high as a lark and—well, frankly, I bought more fish.

Two more Zebras, from Ceylon, and two Black Ruby Barbs, from I don't know where, and two black Fin Tetras, ditto, and two head-and-tail-lights, with a bright red spot on the eye and a green one on the tail, though why they need these traffic accessories for the wide rivers of Brazil is a puzzle to me. And two impossible little gar-snouted fish called Half-Beaks that the man said were pretty classy, being the only live-bearers from India. And last, a Japanese Dojo that humps along the bottom on its fins, takes up mouthfuls of sand to mull over, swallows anything interesting, and shoots the pure sand out its gills. A vacuum cleaner isn't in it.

Doubts, you see, began to enter. I ought to have knocked my skepticism on the head before I measured the cubic inches in my tank, divided by 231, and found I had but three actual gallons of water for a crew adjusted up to the hilt of five. I should have left those handbooks safely in the public library, including a very good one by Mrs. William Mann, of National Zoo fame, that told me my tap water, even though of proper temperature, must be aired for several days to get rid of the poisonous chlorine. When some of the fish came down with the dread disease of Ichthyopthetius multifiliis, showing tiny white spots and rubbing themselves on the sand, I ought to have gone to infinite antiseptic lengths in isolating said fish in special hospital tanks, sterilizing the dip-net used, etc., instead of merely dumping in nine drops of mercurochrome.

But the funny thing is that the fish got well in four days. And, to all effects, chlorinous tap water is so much Alpine ozone to them. And if exactly 23 fish don't find three gallons of water conducive to fine and fancy living, they have at least not deigned to warn me by coming to the top and gulping air.

To do away with some of my fish? Or to go on and buy a still larger tank? The little guppies born on Christmas Eve will be asking the old ones embarrassing questions any day now. Life goes on. And come to think of it, I'd give my left arm to have a Glass Catfish from Borneo that you can see right through, or an Egyptian Mouth Breeder whose little ones live inside its mouth and sally forth only to eat.

I can already see the new splashes on the kitchen floor. O Lechmere Guppy, Esq., look what you went and started!

Other Types of Press

SO, AFTER ALL this discussion, we come to the question, "What kind of press would you substitute for the privately owned American press?"

Papers operated by political parties would not be objective or impartial. We know that from experience and from the nature of political speeches. Politicians never give the opposition credit for any virtues, achievements or good intentions or admit faults or errors in their own ranks. That is just the way of politics. It is like "lawing" in the court. A lawyer in court doesn't call the attention of the jury to the merits of the other side or flaws in his own arguments.

So partisan political papers might have good funnies and bridge lessons and all such package goods. But they would be one-sided in both news and editorial opinion. They would be much more one-sided than the most prejudiced of the privately owned papers, because the worst of these sheets make an occasional stab at being fair, and the worst are very few in number.

Take a Look At Foreign Press

SUPPOSE we had a censored and State-subsidized press such as the communists and "axis" nations have and propose for this country. The Communist and "axis" methods are alike, and anyone who thinks the American papers are unfair in their treatment of news and their editorial interpretation ought to dig into a pile of that kind of press. They shoot people for expressing contrary views, or, in Germany, chop their heads off.

Or we can have the cat-and-dog type of press that clutters the stands in France and used to be seen in Spain and Prague. In Prague commercial presses were rented impartially, and the same press that kicked out a red paper one hour might tear off a run for a Nazi sheet as the next job. The French press is just terrible; it is notoriously corrupt.

French Reporters Live on Graft

PAPERS LIVE on graft, bribes and subsidies and reporters and writers, like waiters, get nominal pay and are expected to graft the rest of their living. The cat-and-dog papers lack continuity and responsibility. They can insult and tell the most horrible lies about people and, having no substance, are no more to be punished than a bad smell in the atmosphere. They can sell out to the Communists or the "axis" propaganda bureaus or to the munitions makers. They also print filth in the guise of literary realism and use shocking language in journalistic debate and justify it as free expression.

Even in this country most editors know what pressure is and dread it. Groups are forever threatening boycotts if their interests are not promoted or if their adversaries are given a fair deal. A completely fair man may be ruined by boycotts from all sides, and he is always buttering and placating arrogant spokesmen who ought to be kicked downstairs and told to mind their own business. But if he doesn't, use salve it's his neck. Frequently, the very people who squawk about bias in the press demand bias in the treatment of their own interests. I think Harold Ickes fits this description.

What Substitute Do They Prefer?

I AM AFRAID, though, that the newspaper business in this country is in for a bad time. Mr. Roosevelt and several other New Dealers have a hate on for the American press, and papers are dropping dead here and there in the country right along and are not being replaced. Taxes and costs are high, and if the New Deal ever gets by with a scheme to disallow the deduction of advertising appropriations from the income of big advertisers it will be much worse. They will abandon their advertising or reduce it to such small volume that most of the press will be starved to death.

Why they want to kill our press or what they intend to substitute for it they have never told us and I can't guess, but I can tell you that whatever it is it won't be as good as the press of today.

This makes about four in a row on the subject of the press, so tomorrow I will throw in my change of pace—maybe heavy philosophy. Or how about something elfin?

Merit Medal Urged For Federal Employes

A meritorious service medal for Government employes is proposed in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Ramspeck, of the Civil Service Committee.

The bill authorizes the President to bestow the medal, upon recommendation of a board, in recognition of unusual physical bravery or distinguished service to the Government or humanity.

Living Costs Steady For 3-Month Period

Secretary Perkins reported yesterday the cost of living in 32 large cities was the same on December 15 as three months previously.

A quarterly survey by the Bureau of Labor Statistics said: "Slight declines in the cost of food, clothing, house-furnishing goods and miscellaneous items were counter-balanced by an increase in fuel and light costs, while rents remained unchanged."

Experts Ask Local Control

DESPITE ITS PLAIN LANGUAGE, the Griffenhagen report has left a great deal of confusion in the minds of many citizens and legislators as to how far the powers of the proposed new District government would extend. It is frequently assumed, for example, that the local governing body would have to obtain specific consent from Congress for every expenditure to be made. That is a wholly erroneous impression.

With the new unified government in control at the District Building, the local budget would go directly from the city administrator to the District commission or council. Hearings would be held and an appropriations measure would be passed—not by Congress—but by the local governing body chosen to represent the community. Of course, Congress would always have power to set aside any fiscal policy which might thus be established. But the unreasonable practice of forcing local appropriations through a national legislature would be at an end.

The Griffenhagen report made no direct comment on budgetary procedure, except to suggest that, with the new setup, it would no longer be desirable to have the Federal Budget Bureau pass judgment on the local estimates. Washington would then have ample budgetary machinery of its own. The only local fiscal issue in which the Federal Government would have a direct interest would be the Federal payment to the District. If that problem can be solved by the Overton formula, all reason for Congressional action on municipal expenditures here will disappear.

Local Problems Locally Solved

IT IS FROM OTHER sections of the report that the intention of the Griffenhagen experts with regard to the local budget becomes clear. "One of the assumptions on which this report is based," we read on page 20, ". . . is that the necessary powers of local government should be vested in a local governing body." Throughout the report runs the theme of creating within the District a genuine municipal government that would take local problems "off the hands" of Congress.

Of course, the greatest burden on Congress, acting in its role of city council for Washington, is enactment of municipal appropriations bills. When the Griffenhagen experts condemned use of "the ponderous machinery of the Federal Government . . . for management of the affairs of the local community" they must have been thinking specifically of Congress' annual task of analyzing and approving the Washington budget.

OTHER PARTS of the report seem to leave no doubt as to where authority over the District budget would be lodged. A municipal corporation with full powers "to make the District a safe, comfortable, healthy and beautiful place of residence for the people of the District" is visualized. Congress is asked to grant the District a "well-rounded organic act similar to the charter of a municipal government of the most modern type." Such a charter would necessarily include authority for the community to spend revenue collected from its own residents.

One of the basic assumptions laid down by experts is:

That the local governing authority so established should be self-contained and have full powers of local government, subject only to the limitations imposed by the organic act, over all matters of local government within the District; that the powers so granted should extend to all such functions of government in the District as are commonly considered to be functions of county, municipal, and special district governments elsewhere, and most of the administrative functions of a State government, in order that full responsibility for all phases of local government may be provided for and unified and systematic administration may be provided.

It would be absurd to talk of creating a regime here comparable to local governments elsewhere, without giving that regime control over its budget. Indeed, fiscal control is the key to responsible city government. Without it, there would be very little hope for any municipal corporation here to attain the status of "self-contained" local government.

A great deal of the legislation by which Washington is governed from year to year is to be found in appropriation acts. If the spending programs of a reorganized District government had to follow the same devious channels through which they now proceed to enactment, there would be a constant temptation on the part of individual Congressmen to upset local plans or policies, without adequate thought or investigation. Moreover, the constant pressure upon the local government to load up its pay roll by finding jobs for the proteges of legislators would continue.

If Congress should refuse to relinquish full control over District expenditures, some improvement might be made by appropriating a lump sum to each department and leaving allocation of the funds to local authorities. That would at least mean distribution of funds in accord with relative needs at the time the expenditures were made. Obviously it is impossible for Congress, with the best will in the world, to foresee a year and a half in advance the specific need for control of disease or for the heating of schools.

Flexibility in the municipal budget is also needed for reasons of economy. When a specific amount is set aside for each function under a rigid law, officials are inclined to spend their allotment whether or not it is needed. Failure to spend up to the last cent might result in a severe slash in the next year's allowance. And, of course, those agencies which run short of funds are left in a crippled condition.

Everything which may be said in favor of a flexible budget enacted by Congress, however, argues with greater force for delegation of fiscal powers to a real local government. Since the aim of the current reorganization move is to separate national and local functions, no halfway measure could be regarded as satisfactory. The proposed District governing body should have just as much power over the local purse as over the adoption of ordinances.

The Congress Would Retain Basic Powers

THIS WOULD NOT mean relinquishment of the authority of Congress to control the Nation's Capital in the interests of the country as a whole. The Senate and House would retain all their ultimate power over the District. They would continue to enact basic legislation for Washington, just as the States do for their cities. But police protection, the control of disease, the maintenance of streets, provision for education and other municipal service would be left to the community which is immediately concerned with such matters.

Congress as well as the District should welcome such a change. For few members of either the House or Senate are willing to give their time to Washington problems which are of little interest to themselves or constituents. When District jobs are brought strictly under the merit system through the personnel department advocated by the Griffenhagen report, there is likely to be even less willingness to give time and attention to District legislation.

Delegation of municipal spending powers to the proposed District governing body would necessitate, of course, a final settlement of the fiscal relations between the national and local governments. So long as Congress is contributing an indefinite sum to the local budget it will doubtless insist upon controlling the city's expenditures. But this issue can be disposed of along with the proposed overhauling of the organic act. Senator Overton has provided an excellent formula that could be relied upon year after year to bring about an equitable division of the Capital City's expenses between Federal and District taxpayers.

Some may regard this proposed delegation of full municipal powers to a local government as a drastic step. Perhaps it would be. But can any one acquainted with the deficiencies of the present system reasonably doubt that a drastic step is desirable? Surely the country in general is interested in seeing the Capital City managed with a reasonable degree of efficiency.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Brandeis

THE LONG CAREER of Louis D. Brandeis shows how much one man can do to shape the course of events. In the past forty years it has been Brandeis, more than any other single man, who has kept American progressives from adopting the socialist, as opposed to the liberal, solution of social problems.

I realize how battered an epithet is the word liberal, how it is used nowadays as a disguise by socialists and even by communists, how oftener than not these days it identifies a socialist who has not quite got the courage of his convictions. But, nevertheless, the word liberal is indispensable in discussing a career like that of Mr. Justice Brandeis. And so, it must be insisted that in its sincere and accurate and historic meaning, liberalism is not some halfway house on the road to socialism; it is the exact opposite of socialism both in its ideal of the good life and of the way to attain it.

The socialist would cure the abuses of property by making the government the great monopolist. The liberal would cure these same abuses by destroying private monopoly. He would do this in order to achieve the widest possible distribution of moderate sized property in the hands of independent and responsible individuals.

Private Property Rights Essential

TO THE SOCIALIST the function of government is to administer the property and labor of the people for the people's good; to the liberal the function of government is to protect the rights of the individual, among them, as Mr. Mark Sullivan pointed out the other day, the right to own property. For the liberal knows that private property is the solid foundation of personal independence and so of human liberty.

Forty years ago when Mr. Brandeis first became a national figure in the United States, men of good will, men who saw that reforms would have to be undertaken, stood at the crossroad: the choice between socialism and liberalism had to be made. In Europe those who wished to be progressive took the socialist solution. In this country the tendency among thinking men was to follow their example. And it was at this critical juncture that the example and the teaching of Louis D. Brandeis were immensely influential, and, it seems to me, decisive.

The matter was tested out in the three-cornered election of 1912: when Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson fought their historic battle for the leadership of American progressivism. In that contest, Theodore Roosevelt became the exponent, though it was contrary to his deeper instincts, of the socialist solution: he called it the New Nationalism. Wilson took the opposite line, to the liberal solution, and called it the New Freedom. In that contest between what we should now call rival ideologies, Wilson's principal adviser was Brandeis. It was from the economic philosophy of Brandeis, and from his immense technical and practical competence, that Wilson drew those leading ideas and those specific measures which made the Wilson reforms liberal and not socialist.

Since Wilson's time American progressivism has had a very different development from European progressivism. For while American social reformers have been and are still pre-disposed to follow the European path, and to think that to be progressive is to be progressing toward socialism, the immense intellectual and moral prestige of Brandeis has been the greatest single thing which restrained them.

Brandeis' Influence On New Deal Great

NONE COULD dismiss Brandeis as a mere defender of vested wrongs. In any concrete question none could fail to see how great was his command of the facts. Thus by the influence of his example the generation of young men who have come to maturity since the war have been inoculated against the easy acceptance of the socialist philosophy. Many of those young men are now prominent in the New Deal. But for the restraining and guiding influence of Brandeis, most of them, like their opposite numbers abroad, would be socialists. Because of Brandeis, though they have often experimented with socialism, they have never done it with a clear conscience and thorough conviction. He has compelled them to realize the dangers, and so to hesitate; he has kept alive in them the belief that social evils can be cured by the methods of freedom.

This, it seems to me, is the historic contribution of Louis D. Brandeis to American life. In the series of reforms which he sponsored before he was appointed to the Supreme Court, he proved to a doubting generation that the liberal solution was not only desirable but that it was feasible; as a judge he has had a part, though Holmes preceded him, in helping to keep the law flexible enough to permit the liberal solution of the social problem. But his main influence does not, I think, lie in his judicial opinions; it lies in his example and his teaching as a reformer in the pre-war era, and in the persistent effect of that example and of that teaching upon a generation of young men.

He has been the greatest anti-socialist of our age, not in the sense of his being a baiter of "reds" and a hunter of heresies, but in the real sense of his having had a positive social philosophy which is wholly opposed to socialism and is its only true alternative.

The quality and temper of his philosophy can best be examined, not in his own writings, but in the tribute paid to him on his eighty-second birthday by Judge Learned Hand of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. For Brandeis does not have the genius of Holmes in raising his ideas to distinguished generalizations: he has been a practical reformer rather than a philosopher. But Judge Hand is like Holmes, a judge who is a philosopher, and like Holmes, he is a master of English prose.

This is how Judge Hand has described the social ideal which Brandeis has held up to his generation:

'Individual Will Not Be Wandering Atom'

"HOW DOES HE see the Good Life? He sees it, I think, in terms of the dignity and the independence of the individual, to be secured by deliberately disabusing ourselves of the obsession of bigness. I see his Commonwealth of the Future as a society made up of much smaller units than those we have. The great cities will either have given place to small, or they will be so divided that within their present areas there will be many sub-cities, each self-sufficient. Speed and change will no longer infatuate us; men will be born, will live and die in the same place, perhaps in the same house. The individual will not be a wandering atom without permanent associations or local ties, ever agitated, ever seeking to better himself, ever aspiring to leave off what he is doing in the name of a progress whose pursuit irritates, without satisfying, him. His tentacles will reach out to those about him and grip them hard, as they in turn will grip him.

"The fabric of these small societies will be tough: it will not be possible to pull away any part of them without leaving some of its fibres behind and tearing away something from what is left. Reputation will not depend upon manipulated publicity: it will be based upon mutual acquaintance and mutual understanding: each will be judged by those who really know him, and none will be called on to judge those whom he does not know. The individual will not be an anonymity, a number, the empty sign of membership in a class.

"Industry will be more genial; among those who have personal contacts, discipline and enforced conformity lose some of their alien and imposed bitterness: the harsh dominion of the machine is assuaged. The industrial units themselves will also be much smaller; for even technologically it is a mistake to suppose that the huge concentrations of modern times are efficient. What they seem to gain in economy of method and in eliminating duplication, they lose because their management and even their comprehension pass the measure of men's minds. Responsibility cannot be successfully divorced from continuous touch with detail: in our present aggregations the direction is either without adequate information, or it lacks the initiative which only responsibility can give.

Mutual Consideration Viewed as Necessary

"AMENITY AND courtesy will be the order of that day, for at close quarters men must learn to live with mutual consideration: one cannot be socially quite intolerable when retribution comes so swiftly. There will be no dominating power, financial or political: individual difference there will be in plenty, but no one will be able to become master. Traditions will arise to correct, to chasten and to inform the hasty and crude conclusions which now sweep resistlessly over our vast undifferentiated societies. There will be no great accumulations of wealth, not only because they will be impossible, but because, no longer submerged in a multitude, the individual will be valued not for what he possesses, but for what he is.

"Something like this in bare outline is that society in which I think he believes that life would be gentle and gracious and noble and free."

This is, is it not, the American ideal of what America is meant to be. And because Louis D. Brandeis did so much more than any of his contemporaries to preserve the faith in the validity of that ideal, historians will call him, I think, the most influential American conservative of his age.

Publishers Deny U. S. Right to Fix Carriers' Rules

By the Associated Press.

Elisha Hanson, general counsel of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, took the position yesterday that the fair labor standards act gave the Government no power to regulate sale and delivery of newspapers by minors.

He voiced this opinion at a hearing on regulations proposed by Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, to permit children between 14 and 16 to work in all occupations excepting manufacturing, mining, operation of motor vehicles and in messenger service.

Provisions would be that the youths work outside of school hours, no more than three hours on school days, no more than eight hours on any day, not more than 40 hours a week and only between the hours of 6 a. m. and 7 p. m.

Hanson indicated any regulation promulgated would be acceptable to the publishers if applied to copy boys and others working in or immediately around newspapers, but not to newsboys.

Mexican Spectacle

By Mark Sullivan

Firm Methods Urged

OUR STATE Department and President Roosevelt are showing more concern over the American-owned oil wells, seized by the Mexican government, than at any time since the seizure took place. For this increased concern there is reason. Those oil wells have become more than a matter affecting the United States and Mexico. They have become a detail of the whole problem described as foreign relations in the broadest sense. They have come to have a part in preparedness as discussed by President Roosevelt in his January address to Congress.

The wells were seized in March last year. About the same time, and previously, certain land holdings in Mexico, large and small, owned by Americans, were similarly seized.

At the time of the seizures, President Roosevelt was described, after one of his press conferences, as saying that he had sympathy for the small American land owners, though not for the large ones. As to the oil companies, Mr. Roosevelt was described as saying that the only compensation they should be entitled to should be cost less depreciation. This indirect statement from Mr. Roosevelt, quoted widely in Mexico, was taken in that country as in some degree meaning that the seizure of the wells was not taken very seriously by our Government.

Oil Expropriation Becomes Serious

SUBSEQUENTLY, our Government pressed the matter of small land holdings to a point where there is a promise on the part of Mexico—though so far only a promise—to give compensation for them. As to the oil wells, no note of protest from our Government has ever been publicly delivered to the Mexican government. This, too, has had the effect, in Mexico, of our Government's seeming not to take the seizure very seriously.

Recently, however, our Government, and the world generally, has been obliged to see the seizure as a serious and far-reaching matter.

Oil from the seized wells—the American ones and also British and Dutch ones—is being bartered by Mexico to Germany and Italy. Thus, oil which belongs to citizens of the democratic nations is being used to strengthen the Nazi-Fascist authoritarian nations, the nations which Mr. Roosevelt says are a threat to the democracies. The oil is being used to strengthen the Nazi-Fascist nations both in a military sense and also in the sense of furthering the infiltration of Nazi-Fascism into other countries by trade.

Further, the spectacle of Mexico seizing American-owned oil wells, without effective protest by our Government, has had echoes elsewhere in Latin America. In some countries, radical political minorities, especially Communists, say that if Mexico can do it, why cannot their countries do it? This puts pressure on Latin-American governments in power, which would prefer to see the American property in their countries protected. In short, our inaction about Mexico encourages communism, not only in Mexico but elsewhere. It encourages the doctrine of the seizure of private property, both foreign owned and internally owned.

3 Possible Steps For U. S. Outlined

THE POSSIBLE steps we might take are three:

First, it happens that the United States has been following a practice (adopted without regard to Mexico) of buying silver at an artificially high price. This high price paid for silver increases the amount of profits made by silver mines in Mexico. This, in turn increases the amount of taxes received by the Mexican government from silver. If the United States were to stop its silver buying, the Mexican government would suffer serious diminution of tax revenue.

This method of handling the oil situation would be indirect. Many think we ought to stop our Government purchase of silver for various reasons. But to meet the Mexican situation in this way would not be meeting it on principle.

Second, we could lift the embargo on shipment of arms from the United States into Mexico. Such action would give arms to internal Mexican opponents of the present Mexican government. But this, likewise, would not be meeting the situation on the basis of principle.

Third, our Government could make what diplomacy calls a firm demand. The common judgment is that if we made a firm demand—if we made it perfectly clear that we would not condone the seizure nor permit the illegal possession to continue indefinitely without compensation — Mexico would act. There is in Mexico a large section of public opinion which does not believe in expropriation. This section of Mexican opinion would be so encouraged by a firm attitude on our part that the Mexican government would recede from its present position.

WE OUGHT NOT, however, to deceive ourselves. We ought not to shrink from facing reality. A demand upon Mexico that is firm, no matter how diplomatically worded, necessarily carries with it the implication that unless the demand is complied with, we will use firm methods. If we did not mean that, we would be bluffing. "Firm methods" mean, in the final analysis, force.

The American-owned Mexican oil wells are now, in effect, a part of the strength of the Nazi-Fascist nations and the Nazi-Fascist ideology. The Nazi-Fascist nations use force. If the democratic nations are unwilling to adopt whatever degree of force is necessary to offset the others' force, then the Nazi-Fascist nations win, as we saw at Munich.

Armies On The Move

Prelude To A New Crisis?

IS THE Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle about to spring an unpleasant surprise on the world?

Rumors to the effect that the totalitarian powers and Japan are planning a joint coup in furtherance of their respective ambitions in Europe, Africa and Asia have been floating around for some time. Possibly such alarmist conjectures are only the product of exaggerated fears with no real substance behind them. But of this no one can be sure. So often, during recent years, have the worst fears been realized that it is unsafe to discount too much even the most exaggerated reports. There may be a grain of truth in them.

BY THIS TOKEN the possibility of a triple play by the triangle powers cannot be dismissed as a figment of the imagination, particularly since the rumors of joint action appear to be substantiated, in part at least, by the reports of very mysterious troop movements involving those three powers.

In Peiping it is said that Japan is steadily adding to her already large military establishment in Manchuria and, strangely enough, doing it at the expense of the forces assigned to North, Central and South China. Coupled with the clamor in the Japanese Diet for strong action and even war against the Soviet Union, such troop movements by Japan may presage a new Russo-Japanese crisis of considerable magnitude.

From Germany comes the report, still unconfirmed and perhaps unconfirmable, that untrained men, outside the regular classes, are being called to the colors at the rate of about 100,000 every three months and this at a time when the Third Reich is suffering from an acute labor shortage both in industry and agriculture. It is also rumored that the German air force, Hitler's greatest weapon of international intimidation, is being kept mobilized at full war strength.

In London, the foreign office has confirmed the persistent rumors that Italy has considerably augmented her garrison in Libya, despite the pledge given Chamberlain to reduce the military force in that colony. Still unconfirmed, but widely believed, is the report that a German force is also being assembled in that Italian colony to co-operate with the Italian troops in that area in the event of war.

Each Triangle Power Acts For Itself

EVEN ASSUMING all these reports as true, as they very well may be, it does not necessarily mean that the triangle powers are preparing to plunge into war. It does not, necessarily, even mean concerted action short of war. There is no reason to believe that Japan, for instance, has any intention of helping Germany aggrandize herself still further or of helping Italy achieve her Mediterranean ambitions. Nor is it likely that the Fascist powers would, for Japan's sake alone, help the island empire in a war against Soviet Russia.

This fact, however, should produce no complacent feelings in London, Paris or Moscow. For in the present state of international affairs it is to Japan's advantage to have Great Britain and France weakened in the Mediterranean; to Italy's advantage to have Japan demonstrate the pusillanimity of Anglo-French policy in eastern Asia and decidedly in Germany's interest to have Russia involved in a struggle in the Far East.

ON THIS BASIS the triangle powers are in a position to help each other simply by pursuing their respective goals as forcefully as they can. That is the real menace of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo combination. And this menace is not diminished one whit by the circumstance that only a limited degree of co-operation obtains between the powers on the other side.

It is quite possible, for instance, that Japanese troop concentrations in Manchuria and the belligerent note struck in a Japanese Diet are maneuvers primarily designed to force Russia to grant Japan favorable fishing rights in waters adjacent to the Soviet Union. It is fantastic to assume, as some do, that, having wasted her substance in a prolonged and still unsuccessful war in China, Japan will now take on an even more formidable enemy. But should Russia submit to a Japanese bluff it would be tantamount to an admission of weakness which Berlin would certainly know how to take into account in preparing for the next stages of the Ukrainian campaign.

Dictators Always Pool Their Bluffs

IT IS DOUBTFUL that Hitler has any desire to go to war on behalf of Italy. Certain leaders of the French government even assume that the Fuehrer will act as a restraining force on Il Duce. But the odds are at least as great that the Third Reich will, if it has to, back up its partner of the Berlin-Rome axis by every means short of war, including the method of intimidation so successfully employed in the period leading up to Munich.

In other words, the strategy which the totalitarian dictators may employ in the situation now developing toward a crisis is likely to be that of threatening war to achieve those ends which, under other circumstances, could not be achieved without war.

If the nerves of the statesmen and people in England and France do not crack under the strain, the strategy may, this time, fail. But there is clearly no assurance of it. They find themselves, today as yesterday, in the position of a man with a sword of Damocles constantly hanging over his head. That situation does not make for calm nerves and cool, unfrightened decisions.

Requiem Mass Is Celebrated Here for Pius

Radio, an instrument that Pius XI was the first Pope to use, was combined with a solemn pontifical requiem mass celebrated in Washington yesterday for the repose of the late Pope's soul.

The mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, in the presence of many high dignitaries of the church, members of the Diplomatic Corps and Government, in the crypt of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at the Catholic University of America.

Part of Mass Broadcast

Part of the mass and the eulogy were broadcast throughout the United States, South America and to Rome, over regular networks of the National Broadcasting Co. and by short-wave transmission. And in the midst of ceremonies, some of which had their beginnings in the catacombs of Rome, worshipers and listeners heard the eulogist praise Pius XI's use of "the newest pulpit of the radio."

"From that pulpit in God's great cathedral of the universe he made heard around the world the living voice of the teaching authority of the Church of Christ," continued the eulogy, delivered by the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university.

"Pope Pius was a man of his time. He thoroughly appreciated and fully employed all legitimate agencies to inform and to organize world opinion . . ."

Draped Catafalque Before Altar

Merging with the timely words of the eulogist were the timeless Latin of the mass, and the ancient detail of the ceremonies. Before the main altar in the crypt was a catafalque, erected to symbolize the Pope's death. It was draped in a black pall on which was inscribed a great white cross. Before the catafalque stood the Papal coat-of-arms, and on top was a replica of the triple crown worn by the Popes on ceremonial occasions.

Forty foreign countries were represented by high officials at the service, as well as both Houses of Congress, the Cabinet, and various agencies of Government or national organizations.

In the sanctuary of the shrine were Archbishop John T. McNicholas, of Cincinnati; Archbishop Thomas J. Walsh, of Newark; Bishop Bartholomew J. Eustace, of Camden; Bishop James Kearney, of Rochester; Bishop Gerald P. O'Hara, of Savannah-Atlanta; the Most Rev. William A. Griffin, auxiliary Bishop of Newark; the Most Rev. John H. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore; the Most Rev. Michael J. Keyes, titular Bishop of Aeropoli; Bishop Francis P. Keough, of Providence; the Most Rev. Constantine Bohachevsky, Ukrainian Greek Catholic Diocese, and the Most Rev. Paul Yu-Pin, Bishop of Nanking, China.

The university choir, under the direction of Dr. Leo Behrendt, sang the Missa et Absolutio Pro Defunctis by Pietro Yon, and the Messa da Requiem by Lorenzo Perosi. Upon the conclusion of Mgr. Corrigan's eulogy, they sang the Deus Ire.

Homage to Pope

Vatican City, Feb. 15 (AP).—Continued homage to Pope Pius XI was paid by sorrowing visitors to his tomb beneath St. Peter's today while interest quickened in preparations for the election of his successor.

Cardinals already here said their conclave would begin as soon as all princes of the church arrived in Rome, but in any case not later than March 1, even if some cardinals were still absent.

(Indications were that the last of the cardinals would reach Rome February 28. They are expected to be Santiago Luis Cardinal Copello, of Buenos Aires, and Sebastiano Cardinal Leme, of Rio de Janeiro, now aboard the liner Neptunia, and William Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, sailing from New York Wednesday with the expectation of transferring to the Neptunia at Gibraltar.)

Possibilities Listed

Vatican City, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Vatican experts predicted tonight that the new Pontiff will be chosen from among five Italian cardinals:

Elias Cardinal Della Costa, 67, Archbishop of Florence; Luigi Cardinal Lavitraono, 65, Archbishop of Palermo; Alessio Cardinal Ascalesi, 67, Archbishop of Naples; Maurilio Cardinal Fossati, 63, Archbishop of Turin, and Giovanni Cardinal Nasalli-Rocca, 67, Archbishop of Bologna.

A special funeral mass was sung today attended by those who had worked closely with Pope Pius.

Pius Won Cardinal's Hat for Work as Papal Nuncio to Poland

AS TEACHER, the Pope speaks on many matters affecting the spiritual life of his world-wide flock. This picture shows the late Pontiff broadcasting over the Vatican radio

At 61, Achille Ratti had been passed by. Only hints had been whispered through Vatican halls that he was a possibility for a position of command. Even Cardinal Gasparri had smiled disparagingly when it was suggested to take him from the Biblioteca Vaticana and put him in diplomacy.

"Ha, no, he won't do. A library mouse! A bookworm!" said the seigniorial secretary of state, using the same words which Achille Ratti had used many years previously to describe himself.

Only once prior to this was "the bookworm" even considered as a collaborator in the government of the church. He was rejected with the answer that his name had been presented too late.

The late Cardinal Cerretti, then substitute secretary of state, was giving early in 1918 an informal wartime supper in his apartment in the Vatican palaces to a small group of Vatican prelates. Some advanced the proposal that the prefect of the Vatican Library would be ideal in the diplomatic service because of his profound learning, his command of languages and his pleasing presence.

Meets Mgr. Ratti

Cerretti was himself impressed especially because it fell upon his shoulders to find suitable prelates who could worthily represent the Holy See to foreign governments. He met Mgr. Ratti.

A few days later, Cerretti, who then held the rank of monsignor, in the regular course of his office, was in conference with Pope Benedict XV, who informed him that the Holy See had received a request from Poland to accredit a representative to that government.

"I made the inquiry according to the Pope's desires," Cerretti told me in his own home after he had become cardinal.

"Then he asked me whom I had to propose for the place. I did not wish to present a choice of names without due deliberation but the Pope was so annoyed that this list was not ready that I immediately proposed the man who was in my mind.

Praised His Learning

"I told him that it was Mgr. Ratti. He thought for a moment and I waited for an answer. 'Certainly,' he said, 'he is one of the most illustrious lights we have in the Vatican.' He told me that he thought his learning and merits in his field were exceptional."

A few days later he was in regular conference with Cardinal Gasparri, who previously slurring the mention of Ratti had now to announce to Mgr. Cerretti that Benedict XV had decided on the prefect of the Vatican Library as the first representative to Poland. He would be given the rank of Apostolic Visitor.

Cardinal Gasparri invited Mgr. Ratti to call. The librarian did not have the faintest idea of the news awaiting him.

"Has the Pope thought the question over from all angles?" inquired Ratti, perplexed and disturbed.

Pope Had Decided

"The Pope has already decided," returned Cardinal Gasparri with unmistakable directness.

Achilla Ratti left the secretary of state fully convinced that he should turn away from this appointment.

The day came and Pope Benedict received him. He was just starting to present his case when the Pope interrupted him to ask: "When do you leave for Poland?"

This query had such a peremptory tone and was so conclusive that the Vatican librarian had no way of refusing.

Cerretti told me how Ratti, immediately following his audience, came directly to his office and there announced that the Pope had really decided for him.

"He told me all that transpired," Cerretti continued.

"We arranged together that he should come every morning to the chancellery of the secretariat of state, where I would prepare for him all the documents and history of the Polish situation. We assigned a table to him.

"He made a resume of all this reading. Then he drew up his list of recommendations which should apply to the case. These were examined by Cardinal Gasparri and myself and we found that Achille Ratti had summarized the whole case perfectly and had made the precise recommendations which the representative of the Holy See should make."

Though the Polish state had been erected by the Austro-German agreement of 1915 and was recognized in the Russo-German treaty of Brest-Litovsk in 1918, it had still to await the outcome of the war before its identity was definitely decided. But the victory of the Allies brought complete independence and it was recognized by the Holy See in March, 1919.

Nunciature Established

A nunciature was established in Warsaw that June and Achille Ratti was made the first nuncio. Since that office, according to Vatican protocol, required the rank of an archbishop, Pope Benedict appointed him Titular Archbishop of Lepanto, with which he assumed all archepiscopal prerogatives.

With the establishment of the new republic, a definite policy for the organization of the dioceses could now be undertaken. This responsibility fell directly upon the shoulders of Achille Ratti. He succeeded in obtaining the necessary recognition for the church in the Polish constitution to the very degree satisfactory to the claims of Roman Catholicism.

It was in the Bolshevik advance into Poland in August, 1920, that he showed his native courage and strength. The Bolshevik army had arrived at the very gates of Warsaw. The diplomatic corps had left the city. But by the miraculous charge of the 800 lads from the Warsaw High School under the orders of their chaplain, Poland was saved. Achille Ratti accompanied these boys to the front and saw their magnificent assault to turn back the enemy. This act was recalled in an official pronouncement of Prime Minister Witos in the Polish Parliament when he paid a high tribute to the Pope's representative for his calmness, judgment and encouraging presence.

On Plebiscite Group

He became a member of the Inter-Allied Commission to conduct the plebiscite for Upper Silesia, which was fiercely contested because of the clashing German and Polish claims to this rich and desirable territory.

This was a delicate and complicated task. There were such currents of opinion, especially among the clergy, due naturally to the national animosities aroused.

The plebiscite was held in March, 1921, and was accompanied by violent nationalistic conflicts between Germans and Poles.

The Polish government intervened and formally asked for his recall. Pope Benedict XV made a thorough examination of the situation and decided that Achille Ratti had taken a scrupulously impartial course in which he was governed "more by the principles of absolute justice as contained in "Christian doctrine" than by the self-seeking claims of the parties in dispute. He told the Polish government that if he were forced to recall his nuncio, he would not send another.

Precedents to Draw On

For the difficult Polish issue, Benedict XV had precedents to draw upon and he sought a way to apply them. They were always recurring. In this case, he realized that while he was forced to support the position maintained by Mgr. Ratti, he had to keep in mind the promotion of friendly relations between the church and the Polish nation without sacrificing principle.

It happened also that the Archepiscopal See of Milan had been without an incumbent ever since the death of Cardinal Andrea Ferrari on February 2 of that same year.

It was Mgr. Cerretti who seized upon the possibilities of this vacancy to liquidate the intricacy. In one of his regular conferences with the Pope he proposed that Ratti be appointed Archbishop of Milan.

Benedict had already decided that the only course open was to adopt the formula "promoveatur ut amoveatur," and for that solution he was quite in agreement with Cerretti. It meant that to remove Ratti he would promote him. The nuncio had done his duty and promotion would signify approval. But the Pope disagreed with Mgr. Cerretti on procedure.

To Become Cardinal

"No," he decreed to Cerretti, "we will not make him Archbishop of Milan until its regular turn. He is already an archbishop and perhaps such a transfer would not be conclusive enough to show that we have elevated him. First, we will create him a cardinal to make no mistake about its being a promotion. Then we will appoint him Archbishop of Milan."

In Warsaw, toward the end of May, Achille Ratti received a telegram from the Vatican asking him whether he would accept the promotion to the cardinalate. He replied that he bowed to the Pontiff's wishes. The Vatican then announced that the Pope would hold a secret consistory on June 13 and that on that occasion he would bestow red hats on Camilo Laurenti, Achille Ratti and Giovanni Tacci.

Pilsudski Receives Him

Achille Ratti was received in a farewell audience by President Pilsudski in the middle of May. He was accorded all the honors of his rank while touching words were expressed at his leaving.

Pope Benedict XV held his secret consistory and created the three cardinals. Ratti received his "biglietto" in the Lombard College, where he had taken his theological training.

The next day, the three new cardinals in their red robes were the center of a second ceremony in Consistory Hall. The Pope imposed upon each one the red biretta and from his throne made an address extolling the accomplishments of their "varied and fertile careers." Of Ratti, he said:

"If we turn to the second of the cardinals on whom we have imposed the first emblem of the new honor, we hear a thousand voices of approval amid the ranks of the followers of diplomatic studies. What an admirable harmony exists in the two ways in which the words 'diplomatic studies' are capable of being taken! Here we have the students of the schools of diplomacy praising the former prefect of the Ambrosian Library in Milan and of the Vatican Library in Rome for the clear-sighted zeal with which he has always favored them in their researches and in interpreting the meaning of the treasures hidden in old documents and ancient records. And secondly, we have the students and masters of diplomacy lauding the Apostolic Nuncio to Poland who was able to strengthen the concord between the church and state with firmness, exquisite tact and imperturbable serenity of spirit in difficult moments and dangerous circumstances.

"We approve the praise of both ranks of diplomats. Not content, however, with the inference that the sacred purple appears once again as the highest honor given for preceding merits, we greet it rather as an incentive to carry the weighty honor of assisting the Pope in the government of the church. Especially do we bespeak this stimulus because it falls upon him who is about to assume the direction of a flock to which both St. Charles Borromeo and Cardinal Andrea Ferrari dedicated heroic efforts."

Hinted at His Choice

The Pontiff, comprehensively justifying Archbishop Ratti's elevation to the purple for his work in Poland, had hinted at his choice for the Archepiscopal See of Milan. The official appointment was announced in the public consistory which the Pope held on June 16.

The most startling of all the audiences which attended the induction of the new cardinals was the last one in which Pope Benedict XV received them together. As the three new cardinals sat before him he said to them:

"There has been a generous display of red during the past few days but soon there will be a distribution of white, and the white robes will surely fall upon one of you."

Stunned by His Words

His triumphal entry to take possession of his see occurred on September 8, 1921. No Milan archbishop in modern times had been received with such public and official recognition.

In his address that day, Cardinal Ratti uttered words which later were to be translated into acts regarding the reconciliation of church and state in Italy.

He had hardly taken possession of his archdiocese when he began a systematic visit of its wealth of institutions.

The choice of Cardinal Ratti's motto for his archepiscopal coat of arms, "Raptim Transit"—He Passes Quickly—determined ecclesiastics to attribute to him a rare sense of intuition. His rule as Cardinal-Archbishop of Milan lasted exactly 180 days. Thence he ascended the throne of St. Peter to rule the Catholics of the whole world.

The prophecy of Benedict XV was fulfilled.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should Girl of Cultured Background Marry Self-Made Man Whose Social Crudities Trouble Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 25 years old, college educated, not unattractive in appearance, and come of a family of gentle people with education and culture but limited means. For four years I have taught school and held my position with credit, although I do not really like teaching and hesitate to grow older in the profession.

A man of 35, who owns a profitable drugstore, wants me to marry him. He is a self-made man with only a common school education and comes of very plain people. His father is a mechanic with a second wife who is a very ordinary sort. They live in the same town with my druggist friend. By great industry and perseverance he managed, wholly through his own efforts, to get licensed as a pharmacist and earned enough money to start his business. He has the instincts of a gentleman, but his speech and table manners and dress fall far short of what I should like in a life partner.

I have more than respect for him. His attentions to me have been charming. In fact, I am sure I love him, but I am not sure that my love is strong enough to warrant marriage to a man whose education is so limited. If I married him it would not be merely for the purpose of getting a home. I can manage very well to keep a roof over my head, and am far from mercenary.

My friend is naturally intelligent and apparently quite observing and imitative of the manners of men and women who have enjoyed greater opportunities in their youth. He is sensitive and somewhat retiring and I have never dared to act as his teacher, or to try to correct his speech.

My only other proposal was from a man so dissipated that I would not dream of trying to reform him. Do you believe I could work the necessary changes in my druggist friend after marriage, without giving him offense? Or had I better try it before marriage and see how he takes it? An elderly woman of my acquaintance who has been married twice told me that she had found a woman could do anything she wanted with a man before marrying him, but could not influence him much after marriage. Yours truly,

PERPLEXED.

Hazardous Enterprise

DEAR PERPLEXED: Like the heroine of Edna Ferber's "So Big," you have (one assumes) gone away from home to teach, and in your new environment have struck up a friendship with a type of man who is a complete outsider to the circle into which you were born and according to whose traditions you have been trained. This man has constituted himself a serious admirer, and you find much that is genuinely appealing in his personality and character. Now, the question is: Shall you marry him?

Well, with this particular history of circumstances to consider—it appears that marriage to this man would mean taking up permanent residence in his community, which would mean accepting a ready-made place for yourself in that community's scheme of things—a place predetermined by his background and his present pattern, or level, of social life. Such a concession would be almost inexprably implicit in the step. And thus you would have little circumstantial support or overt justification for trying to reshape his social personality according to a traditional pattern which you have been accustomed to deem most desirable.

If the situation were reversed; if the man had been the newcomer to your community, for instance; if the friendship had developed against the familiar backdrop of your own assortment of relatives and friends, and if marriage meant that he would thereby become a permanent fixture in the circle to which he had been gradually introduced — then, and then only, might you reasonably hope to make him over to conform to the mosaic of which he had become a part. For then he might see some justification for the desired transformation, and might even be willing to set the pace in achieving it.

Under the circumstances, I can only suggest that you put the man's potential suitability as husband to the test by mingling freely with his friends, more or less on their terms, on the one hand, and by drawing the man into the circle of your family, and friends at home, on the other hand. If you find yourself a fish out of water when attempting to take his background in your stride, or him in a comparable predicament when trying to make headway among your accustomed associates, to the extent that either is painfully embarrassed, apologetic or on the defensive about the other—then I would say that marriage would probably be a very hazardous enterprise, indeed.

There is no getting around the fact that when a man and woman marry, each adopts and is partially adopted by the other's kinsmen and intimates. Unless, of course, an irreconcilable conflict exists, as between two immutably alien camps—in which case one or the other is bound to find himself a stranger in a foreign field, or out on a limb, or heavily penalized, as you choose to consider it. In this case, you would be the person who would be required to pay the heavier price, in loss of face amongst your erstwhile kind, for marrying this man. Therefore, unless you are entirely sure the sacrifice would be richly justified—in the sense of this man's being all you would ask of life, and more; of all others counting as nought compared to him—you had best think twice before marrying him.

Frankly, I don't think you are head over heels in love with him, by any means. I believe you are lonely for friends, hungry for love, grateful for his devotion, and a trifle panicky at what you consider the prospect of spinsterhood. And it is just this state of mind—this feeling of present deprivation and dread of worse to come—which stampedes many a woman into a foolish marriage that later she would give a great deal to be able to undo. I think the time and effort you might invest in trying to make this man over into a socially presentable (from your point of view) husband would be much better spent in extending your search for the essentially more suitable man.

SMOTHERED PORK CHOPS

Select 4 thick chops, at least an inch thick. Roll in ¼ cup of flour and place in a shallow dish. Sprinkle with ¼ teaspoon of paprika and ½ teaspoon of salt, 2 tablespoons of minced onions, 2 tablespoons of diced celery, and 1 tablespoon of chopped parsley. Add ½ cup of water and cover. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Baste several times. Add ¼ cup more of water and cook another half hour—or until tender.

Twill-Tex and Patent For Spring Shoes

An old-fashioned fabric favorite will be seen on the most modern and streamlined of feet this spring. It is called Twill-Tex by its style sponsors who wove it with Lastex to give a stretchable new comfort. The bright crop of new spring prints and sheer wool frocks will take well to the preciseness of twill footwear. Its chic, ribbed fabric texture is perfect for tailleurs

The slightly formal air of the newly rediscovered twill fabric is seen to neat advantage in the Kent pump at lower left. Its heel and toe are of sleek patent, as are also the heel and trim of the open-toe twill oxford, at center below. A V-shaped cut-out ornaments the urbane Twill-Tex oxford at lower right. This slipper is called Elan—so named for its dashing and spirited line. It is suitable for varied occasions

Clare Boothe Throws Night Club Party for Friends

New York, Feb. 15.

MY IDEA of the height of luxury is to be able to hire a fashionable night club, lock out the public and throw a private party for my pals.

Just to show you how well Clare Boothe has been doing at the playwrighting business this dashing author of "The Women" and "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" took over the fancy saloon known as El Morocco the other night, bolted the doors against the cash customers and tossed an elegant shindy for about 300 of her chums and other well-known people.

Of course, her husband is the baldish Henry Luce, publisher of Time and Fortune, but he was practically no bother at all. The doll-faced hostess, who dips her pen in vitriol whenever she sits down to write a piece, solved her job by leaving the guests strictly on their own. All they had to amuse them was a good dance band an overstocked bar and very fine grub. Of course, celebrities were a dime a dozen, as is always the case at these brawls. Among the people noted were Gladys Swarthout, Fredric March, Clifton Webb and the other Luce so often confused with the hostess In fact, Authoress Clare Luce and Actress Claire Luce, last seen in "Of Mice and Men," met for the first time, and were very calm about the whole thing. All in all, the whole party just goes to show what a harmless-looking blonde can accomplish by sitting down and writing powerful pieces for the theater. It was the party of the season to date.

Who should turn up here in a nice East Side apartment but Theda Bara, who was the most famous of screen vampires twenty years ago! Now Mrs. Charles J. Brabin, wife of a film director, Theda began her weird Hollywood career as Theodosia Goodman, of Cincinnati, Ohio. But the movie geniuses gave her a last name by merely spelling Arab backward, and away she went on her colorful career of cinematic sin.

Skin Tones Are Measured for Powder Selection

The old hit and miss method, long practiced by women in the selection of their cosmetics is on the wane. For the scientific measurement of skin tones removes the guess work, according to Serge de Gorin, Hollywood color expert and representative of a well-known cosmetic manufacturer.

"No two women have exactly the same skin tones," said Gorin. "Each woman's skin has its own individual coloring. However, each skin is composed of the same spectrum colors. But these cannot be detected with the naked eyes."

To analyze the skin for the proper shades of foundation cream, powder, rouge and lipstick, Mr. Gorin uses a spectro-dermascope machine. This machine measures the tones of the skin with mathametical precision. Colors are analyzed by widths of the skin, colors as reflected in the three basic colors, green blue and red, through various lighting devices.

Avocado Crop Reaches New High

Los Angeles, Calif.—The largest movement of avocados in the history of California reached its peak recently when 20 carloads moved toward the Middle West and East. This year's crop, which is now at its peak, the largest in the history of the industry in California, is expected to reach a total of 50,000,000 avocados. Contrary to usual experience with bumper crops, the majority of this tremendous tonnage is of excellent quality.

Stubborn Rust Stains

Stubborn rust stains sometimes can be removed by boiling the article for 10 minutes in a quart of water containing 2 tablespoons of cream of tartar, then rinsing thoroughly in cold water.

SHE—Oh, hello, darling! I'm so glad you're here!

HE—What's the matter?

SHE—Oh, everything's gone wrong, and I do believe I'm taking down with the grippe.

HE—Say, that's too bad! That's just what's the matter with me. That's why I came home early. I don't feel a bit good——

SHE—Oh, I'm sorry! You know I'm just so tired and I ache in every bone——

HE—That's me exactly. To tell you the truth I haven't felt good for two days. Of course, I never say much about such things and anyway I didn't want to worry you——

SHE—Well I didn't want to complain, but I really felt rotten all day yesterday——

HE—Mine really started the day before yesterday——

SHE—And then today why I was simply woozy——

HE—You were! Why on earth didn't you do something? You know I got dizzy two or three times today at the office——

SHE—You were! Oh darling, why didn't you come home? . . . Honestly, my throat's so sore.

HE—Well why don't you go right to bed? Say, I was wondering if some of that Magic Balm wouldn't help my throat. Do you know where it is?

SHE—I'll get it in a minute. Another thing, I've been having a lot of chilly sensations——

HE—Me too! Say, did you ever have your legs ache clear down to the toes?

SHE—That's just the way I've been all day. Honestly, I thought I could never keep up——

HE—Well, why on earth didn't you go to bed? You know, at noon I just thought I'd have to come home——

SHE—How could I go to bed, with all this work? Besides, on top of everything else, Viola didn't come.

HE—She didn't! Well, Miss Clipper didn't show up, either. Of course, she'd have to get down with the grippe. You know how women are around an office. They catch everything.

SHE—Well, of course, if there was a germ anywhere in 10 miles Viola'd grab it. And, on top of that, old Mrs. Gadsby had to come and stay, and stay——

HE—Why didn't you tell her to go home? Oh, yes, and then we had to have the auditors——

SHE—And then, of course, Junior had to act up——

HE—And then Flint had one of his grouches on and rode everybody to death——

SHE—Oh, that's too bad, darling! Why didn't you tell him where to get off . . . Oh, yes; and another thing, Fifi had to get in a fight with that cur next door and I had to run out in the cold——

HE—Why on earth don't you take care of yourself? I tell you, it doesn't pay to neglect a cold. Now, I really should have come home at noon.

SHE—Why didn't you? I know I ought to be in bed this minute. I just know I've got temperature.

HE—Well, why don't you just let everything go and go right to bed? . . . Oh, say, I just thought of something! I wonder if a hot lemonade wouldn't take this awful taste out of my mouth. Are there any lemons?

Tube Skirts Return In Paris Styles

Paris (AP).—High-waisted, tight-skirted tube styles of the eighteenth century French directorate period were featured at this week's fashion showings.

These included models true to the period, with waistlines under the bust and tiny puffs for sleeves. Scarfs in the directorate manner were looped low in the back. Molyneux introduced these eye-opening styles in ivory satin and in color satins which he called "Josephine mauve" and "Directoire green."

Bankhead Tea at The Mayflower Draw Large Congressional Turnout

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

"BUSIEST AFTERNOON I've had this season—two parties before this."

There was a note of pride, thick as a London fog, in the voice of the generously upholstered woman who whispered this by way of greeting a trio of mink-swathed friends yesterday afternoon. A second later the four had disappeared through the door of the Mayflower's Chinese room, and when I saw them again they were beaming on the two hostesses who shook hands with several hundred men and women making the rounds between 4 and 7 o'clock.

HOPE R. MILLER

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring's "at home" and the mammoth reception at the Congressional Club drew the Congressional contingent in droves; but sooner or later, virtually everybody who was out and about with calling cards in hand turned up at the Bankhead tea at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. William B. Bankhead and Mrs. John H. Bankhead received their guests before a bank of ferns massed against a wall of the spacious Chinese room. The wife of the Speaker was becomingly gowned in a floor-length frock, fashioned with a moss-green crepe skirt and a green and gold lame blouse, set off with an orchid corsage. The Senator's wife wore a frock of black lace, trimmed with a big bow of black velvet at the neckline.

Sharing the spotlight with their wives were "the Bankhead brothers," who took their stand across the room near the tea table and were completely surrounded as long as they lingered. While Sidney and several members of his orchestra played, the crowd eddied and swirled around the huge table that was loaded with dainties, and centered with a gold standard filled with roses, iris, gladioli and mimosa reflected in the mirrored base.

Mrs. Garner Heads List of Assistants

Mrs. John Nance Garner headed the list of women who assisted. Others who took turns at the tea pot and coffee urn were Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. James F. Byrns, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Malin Craig, Mrs. Sam Hobbs and Mrs. Harry B. Hawes.

While several hundred called before the party was over, the crowd did not assume crush proportions at any time. The influenza epidemic and the weather had its affect on the gathering that was big enough to be interesting, yet small enough to be pleasant.

Many Notables Seen in Crowd

Seen in the crowd: Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, whose dark red ensemble was worn with a silver fox neckpiece; Mrs. Claude E. Pepper, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. T. Lansing Snyder; Mrs. Lister Hill in a trim brown frock worn with a fur trimmed turban; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri, Mme. Vladimir Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slovak Minister; Mrs. Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Royal McKenna, Mrs. James H. Hughes, Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister; Mrs. William D. Byron, whose snappy print frock and dark red straw hat were outstanding spring fashion notes; Mme. Joaquin Elizalde, Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. Mark Conrad, Mrs. O. Marx Gardner., Mrs. James H. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck.

Also, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Claude Pepper, who came near the end of the party; Mrs. Ralph Church, Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Mrs. James F. Byrns, jr., whose gray frock was worn with a smart red hat; Mrs. Karl Stefan, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie; Mrs. William Beale, Miss Fanchon Aldrich, whose bright red hat was an attractive splash of color in a crowd generally accented with brown and black ensembles; Mrs. Jesse Wolcott, Mrs. R. J. Taylor and dozens of others.

Cafferys Feted On Visit Here

The United States Ambassador to Brazil and Mrs. Jefferson Caffery are being widely feted during their visit in Washington. Last evening, they were guests of honor at a dinner given by Representative and Mrs. Richard B. Wigglesworth, and on Tuesday evening they were guests at a dinner at which Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will give a dinner for them tomorrow night, and on Sunday, they will be guests of honor at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long. James Clement Dunn of the State Department is planning a dinner for them early next week.

Ropers En Route For Opening of Golden Gate Fair

The former Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper are on their way to San Francisco, where Mr. Roper, as official representative of President Roosevelt, will speak at opening of the Golden Gate Exposition Saturday.

On February 22, Mr. Roper will deliver an address at a convocation of the University of California. Before returning to Washington the first week in March the former Secretary and Mrs. Roper will spend a few days at Los Angeles, with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Hunter Roper.

Miss Tearney Bride Of Thomas Schneider

Now on a Mediterranean cruise, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Franklin Schneider will make their home, on their return, at 5131 Broad Branch road. Their wedding took place Tuesday at Baltimore.

Mrs. Schneider is the former Miss Bernice Tearney and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo F. Tearney.

Cocktail Party Planned

Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Wilmer will entertain at a cocktail party Saturday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Hollister. Last evening, the Wilmers gave a dinner for 14 guests.

Wives of Nation's Solons Capture the Social Scene

Harris & Ewing.

Among the parties given yesterday by wives of members of Washington's officialdom was the tea at the Mayflower from 5 to 7, at which Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, and Mrs. John M. Bankhead, wife of Senator Bankhead, were joint hostesses. In the picture above are shown Mrs. William B. Bankhead (left) and Mrs. John Bankhead as they greeted Mrs. John N. Garner (right) wife of the Vice President and one of the guests at their reception

Mrs. Woodring Holds 'At Home'

The new apartment of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring was the scene of the latter's last "at home" of the season yesterday afternoon when a number of notables braved the weather and defied the influenza epidemic to call between 4 and 6 o'clock.

The big rooms of the apartment were gay with mixed spring flowers and a large bowl of Easter lilies centered the tea table. The hostess was gowned in black faile, floor length, with tuxedo lapels and a small corsage of sweetheart roses on either shoulder. Mrs. Robert E. Greenwood, of Fitchburg, Mass., received with her sister and was gowned in black with a corsage of white orchids.

Generally in charge of the dining room during the afternoon was Mrs. Julian L. Schley. Assisting at the tea table were Mme. Rajamaitri, Mrs. Mary Baxter, Mrs. Millard Tydings and Miss Bertha de Hillebrandth, who is a house guest of Mrs. James J. Davis. At the coffee table were Lady Marler, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone.

Among those noted during the afternoon were Mme. Bostrom., Mme. de Bianchi, Senora de Espil, Mme. Elizalde, Mrs. Charles Edison, Mr. and Mrs. James F. O'Connor, Gen. and Mrs. Malin Craig, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Justice and Mrs. Peyton Gordon, Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Judge and Mrs. Charles Hatfield, Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, Mrs. James J. Davis, Representative and Mrs. Harold K. Claypool, of Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Bryan Lee, Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Walter Riddell, Miss Ruth Sigrid Grafstrom, Mrs. Jay L. Benedict.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THERE WERE two Ambassadors, one Ambassador's wife, and two former Ambassadors at the very small cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by the Charge d'Affaires of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus in honor of our envoy to that country, Norman Armour. The Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Fryere y Santander; Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine envoy, and William S. Culbertson and Hoffman Philip, both former Ambassadors to Chile from this country, were all present.

Mr. Armour will leave this afternoon for Florida and will take the plane from there on Saturday for Santiago, where he has a luncheon date on Tuesday. He has been here to confer with the State Department and also with Red Cross officials on getting help for Chilean victims of the recent earthquake.

THE HOME of Senor and Senora de Huneeus has one of the most attractive small living rooms of any house in Washington. The walls are tinted pale green; there is a lighter green rug on the floor, and the sofa and chairs are covered with lemon yellow chintz appliqued with green flowers. Yesterday this room was filled with vases of white gladioli, the green stems of which harmonized with the color scheme of the room.

Most of the guests gathered in the bar downstairs, which has bright red walls and comfortable chairs upholstered in red leather. There is a row of stools at the bar itself, and perched on them one feels exactly as though one were in a night club.

THE HOSTESS wore a black dress, street length, with a necklace of gold beads and gold bracelets. With the exception of one or two, every woman present yesterday wore black, including Senora de Espil. She told us that not only is the Ambassador down with a slight touch of grip, but even his doctor has fallen ill with it!

Mrs. Culbertson and Mrs. Philip accompanied their husbands to the party. Ernest Swift, vice president of the Red Cross, and Mrs. Swift also were present, the latter wearing a dark blue silk dress and a red turban.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins was an early arrival, and others present were Signora Casmelli, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Italian Embassy—her husband too is a grip victim; Harold Horan, Junia Culbertson, Mrs. Robert Knowlton, the former Rebeca Trucco daughter of the Chilean Ambassador to this country, and Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union.

SENOR AND SENORA HUNEEUS were at one time scheduled to leave, owing to the change of governments which recently took place in their country. They still have not heard definitely, but expect to be here anyway for three or four months longer. It is not certain whether Ambassador Trucco will return to this country from his vacation; it has been rumored that he would not.

OSWALDO ARANHA, Brazilian foreign minister, expects to conclude his official visit here tomorrow or Saturday. He will spend a week in New York before sailing back to Brazil . . . Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who is in New York until the end of the week, has been to the opera every evening and every matinee since arriving there.

Mrs. Imbrie Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower in honor of Mrs. Foster Stearns, whose husband is Representative from New Hampshire and a son of Frank Stearns, who was a close friend of the late Calvin Coolidge.

Mrs. Joseph E. Casey, wife of Representative Casey, of Clinton, Mass., who was in Washington just for the day, acted as cohostess with Mrs. Imbrie.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Justice Stone, was the ranking member of the company, and others present were Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, Miss Alma Ruggles and Miss Ann Mitchell, who worked with Mrs. Stearns and Mrs. Imbrie after the war on relief for Russian refugees in Constantinople; Mrs. Samuel Reber, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. George T. Marye, Mrs. Will Leonard Lowrie, Mrs. William B. Poland, who before her marriage was with the Red Cross in Constantinople; Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. P. Lee Phillips, who was a member of the Washington Near East Relief Committee; Mrs. Garth Healy, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Lawrence Baker, Mrs. Walter Riddell, Mrs. E. C. Gudger, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Harold M. Stephens, Mrs. Charles March, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Mrs. Royal McKenna, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Harry Lee Rust, Mrs. Frank Slingluff, jr., Mrs. Paul E. Johnson, Mrs. Pere Wilmer and Miss Mary Patten.

McCormicks Give 'Bank' Card Party

Guests, who included members of the younger set, were Mrs. Carl Schied, Mrs. R. D. White, Mr. and Mrs. Riggs McCormick, Mrs. E. H. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Faver, Miss Joe Blades, Miss Olive Chase, Miss Mary Goodrick, Miss Martha Williams and Mrs. Mary Carpenter.

Also Mrs. Frances Stephens, Miss Anne Moorhead, Eldrigde Miller, Jack Robertson, Russell Klise and Louis Stephens.

Mrs. Blackburn Visits Father, F. W. Reed

Mrs. J. T. Blackburn, wife of Lieut. Blackburn, U. S. N., and her young son, John, have arrived in Washington from California.

They are the guests of Mrs. Blackburn's father, Franklin W. Reed, at his home on Cleveland avenue. Before her marriage,

Californians Here To Be Dinner Guests

Californians prominent in Washington will attend two dinner parties to be given tomorrow prior to the Treasure Island ball at the National Press Club, which will herald the Golden Gate International Exposition, which opens in San Francisco on Saturday.

Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell and Mrs. Frank Buck, wife of the Representative from California, will act as hostesses at the dinners.

Justice Justin Miller, recently elected president of the California State Society, and Mrs. Miller will be the honored guests at Mrs. Caldwell's party. Others attending will be Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, T. A. M. Craven, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Deimal, Mrs. Golden Bell, Mrs. Charles Henderson, Mrs. Thad Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gates, Mr. and Mrs. George Romney, Mr. and Mrs. William Niller, Col. and Mrs. Clinton B. Tribby, Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Preston, Mrs. Grace Kanode Vicker, John O'Leary and Maj. Horace Smith.

Elizaldes Entertain

The Philippine High Commissioner and Mme. Elizalde entertained at dinner last night in their apartment at the Shoreham. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gableman, Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frantz and Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle Bargeron.

Plans Breakfast

Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes will entertain at a New England breakfast party a week from Sunday.

O'Briens Hosts At Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien entertained at a dinner last night at the Metropolitan Club. Mr. O'Brien will leave Saturday for a month in California, where Mrs. O'Brien expects to join him later.

Guests last night were Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Representative Allen Treadway, former Senator Robert Bulkley, Dr. and Mrs. Winifred Overholser, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Morley, Dr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Berryman and Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

Mrs. Burke, Mrs. Brewster Give Reception At Congressional Club for Opera Singers

Legislators Join Wives at Concert; Mme. Salvi and Bentonelli Heard in Classic Offerings at Gathering

By Elizabeth Ford.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS took a day off from balancing the budget to join their wives in balancing a tea cup at the reception yesterday in honor of the opera stars who are singing this week to Washington's golden horseshoe at Constitution Hall. The party, given by Mrs. Edward R. Burke, president of the Congressional Club, and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, convened at the Congressional Club headquarters on New Hampshire avenue.

An hour after the first guest had gone down the receiving line the stars themselves were still missing and the word rustled around that perhaps they had taken the wrong road and had gone to the Congressional Country Club out in Maryland. However, they finally arrived, all in good order and fine voice. While the Marine Band Orchestra in its red-coated uniforme took time out for a few well-earned sandwiches, Mme. Margarita Salvi sang "Estrallita" and Giuseppi Bentonelli contributed some barytone touches from "Carmen." They were introduced by Gen. John Phillip Hill, who made a brief but forceful plea for a national opera.

Hostesses Wear Black Gowns

Back on the receiving line: Mrs. Burke was attired in black starched lace with which she wore a wide brimmed black hat and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Brewster had selected for the occasion a gown of black lace and chiffon, and her small hat, covered with a crown of roses, was trimmed with a wisp of a veil. Representative Brewster wandered about among the guests, greeting friends. Others in the receiving line were Mrs. O. H. Benton, the mother of Signor Bentonelli (Joe Benton to you Oklahomans); Bentonelli, himself; Mme. Emma Redell, Mme. Margarita Salvi, Mme. Lucy Monroe, Frederick Jagel, George Rasely, Josepha Chekova and Mme. Frances Barnard.

Tea and coffee corner: Among those officiating at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who wore a short fur cape over her black dress; Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who was in wine red; Mrs. Henry Wallace, who was in an even darker red trimmed with touches of mauve-gray; Mrs. Morris Sheppard in black trimmed with lime; Mrs. George Norris, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. Wallace White, jr., Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, in black and silver fox; Mrs. Ernest Lundeen in a black dress topped off with a close fitting white hat, and Mrs. Daniel Reed, former president of the Congressional Club.

Rep. Rogers At Tea Table

Still others at the tea table were Mrs. William Whittington, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Jessie Sumner, Mrs. Joseph Byrns and Mrs. Bertrand Snell.

Generally assisting were Mrs. Scott Lucas, Mrs. John Taber, Mrs. Richard Kleberg, Mrs. Charles McLaughlin, Mrs. Emmet O'Neal, Mrs. Clarence Hancock, Mrs. Otis Bland, Mrs. Wilson Lee. Miss Anne Louise Blandon, Mrs. Joseph Herbert, jr., Miss Ruth Reed and Mrs. Thomas Wadden.

Mrs. W. D. Byron Among Guests

Still others were Mrs. John Kee, Mrs. Nat Patton, Mrs. Edward C. Moran, Mrs. A. Willis Robertson, in blue; Mrs. William D. Byron in an attractive print frock; Mrs. Colgate W. Darden, jr., Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin in tweeds; Mrs. W. R. Poage, Mrs. Leland M. Ford, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie and Mrs. John E. Rankin.

Also Mrs. Royal McKenna, Mrs. John E. McClure, Frau Von Boetticher, wife of the military attache of the German Embassy; Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, and many, many others.

Miss Sampson Becomes Bride

An engagement of long standing culminated in the wedding yesterday of Miss Margaret Louise Sampson, daughter of Mrs. Odiorne Hawk Sampson and the late Col. Sampson, and James McSherry Wimsatt, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kurtz Wimsatt, of this city.

The ceremony took place at eleven o'clock in the morning at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, with only members of the two families attending. The Rev. John Czyz, of St. Michael's parish, officiated.

Sister Serves as Maid of Honor

The bride wore a three-piece suit of periwinkle blue with hat and accessories of navy blue and a corsage of orchids. Miss Justine Sampson, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a gown of shaded gray with cherry accessories and a corsage of orchids.

William Kurtz Wimsatt, jr., brother of the bridegroom, flew down from Yale University to be best man for his brother.

On Wedding Trip To Florida

When the couple left on their wedding journey, the bride was wearing a traveling suit of japonica wool with matching accessories. They will motor through Florida to St. Petersburg, Miami and Palm Beach, returning by way of Fort Benning, Ga., where they will stop for a visit with Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Offer. On their return they will make their home in Washington.

The bride is a descendant of the late Admiral Sampson, of the Navy, and of the late Col William Ware, of the British Army, who was her great-grandfather. She attended King-Smith Studio School and is now studying music with Henry Kaspar Studio.

Mr. Wimsatt, who graduated from Catholic University in 1935, is descended from a distinguished line of Maryland and Virginia notables. He is the grandson of the late Chief Justice James McSherry, of the Maryland Court of Appeals, and the late William A. Wimsatt, of this city.

Thaches Hosts At Supper for Oswaldo Aranha

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Thach entertained at a buffet supper last evening in honor of Oswaldo Aranha, Brazil's Foreign Minister.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Catledge, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. George Preston Marshall, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Miss Dorothy Nicholson, Mrs. Pilsen Warren, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Arthur Krock, Juan Trippe, Decio de Moura, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Miller, of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morgan, of New York; Harry Cram, of Bluffton, S. C., and Sig Janas, of Chicago.

D. C. Child Welfare Work 'Primitive,' Declares Expert; Lays 'Frozen Program' to Accumulation of Neglect

Jacob Kepecs Reports at Meeting Called by Voters League and Council of Social Agencies; Chicagoan Urges Five New Services After Survey

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The primitive quality of Washington's pioneer work in child welfare remains, but the pioneer spirit is gone, Jacob Kepecs told representatives of public and private welfare agencies at a meeting called yesterday by the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters and the Council of Social Agencies. Mrs. Eugene Meyer opened her home for the session at which Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor presided.

The body went on record with a request that Mr. Kepecs' full report "be made available at the earliest possible time." Mr. Kepecs, who is executive director of the Jewish Children's Bureau of Chicago, was appointed by the District Commissioners last October to continue an investigation of child welfare services begun last summer by Miss Dorothy Henry, of Cleveland.

He placed the blame for the District's "frozen program" on no particular individuals or groups. "It is the result of an accumulation of lack of progress and you must make a leap now to bridge the gap between present needs and what was once well done," he asserted.

He recommended as five primary needs a director to co-ordinate the various services; adequate staff to make proper provision for intake; to investigate homes where housekeeper service could be arranged and to carry on foster home care services; establishment of a psychiatric service and a new receiving home for children in need of care until the court makes disposition of their cases.

Estimates Cost At $250,000

Kepecs gave "a quarter of a million dollars" as a rough estimate of the cost of these additional services, but pointed out that expenditures for the care of children would ultimately cut down that entailed in crime and health cost in the future, as result of neglect.

"Washington's large prison population is one reason it is particularly becoming for the city to investigate its child welfare program," he said.

"People talk glibly about protective services, but little is done about them," said Mr. Kepecs. "Many families are broken because no one who knows how to help them is available. I am recommending that there be provision to help families at the point where they are threatened with a break-up.

"I am recommending that you add a service for the unmarried mother and her child, especially the colored; the housekeeper service as an alternative to placing children outside of their own homes; development of good public services for colored childen who find private resources barred to them."

In this connection, he added, the colored children were better with public services than under care with discarded facilities which were no longer used by other groups.

Protection has to begin with public health services, Mr. Kepecs said, and the last line of defense is the family. He recommended a strong service for care of children in foster homes wherever possible rather than in institutions.

Mr. Kepecs recommended developing first the foster home service and that which would keep the child in his own home and then giving attention to institutional services. These will depend upon the efficiency of the other, he pointed out.

Urges Manageable Case Loads

He urged manageable case loads for workers who have supervision of children in foster care homes. There is great risk in placing children in the care of others without this, he asserted.

Other recommendations were for a good home finding department; foster home care service for convalescent children, eliminating the alternatives of keeping them in expensive hospital beds or having inadequate care for them on return home; provision for a good licensing system of both homes and private institutions and social supervision for the feeble-minded in their own homes or foster homes where this is possible, rather than putting them all in institutions.

After the program is under way, the proposed director of child welfare would have plenty to do, Mr. Kepecs said, in developing protective services in the schools, "where 100 social workers are needed," working out the playground program to serve areas where it is particularly deficient, and in similar projects.

The group which met yesterday will name a committee to present the substance of Mr. Kepecs' report to citizens associations and other organizations throughout the city as soon as it is officially released.

Among those attending yesterday's meeting were Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, president of the Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, president of the League of Women Voters; Judge Fay Bentley of the Juvenile Court; Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department; Mrs. Louisa Roberts, executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies; the Rev. Lawrence J. Sheehan, director of the Catholic Charities; Morris Klass, director of the Jewish Social Service; Miss Genevieve Gabower, of the Juvenile Court; Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mrs. F. G. Montgomery, president of the Twentieth Century Club, and Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti.

At the child welfare meeting yesterday for which Mrs. Eugene Meyer opened her home, 1624 Crescent place were (left to right), Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, who presided; Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, president of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters; Jacob Kepecs, who has just completed a survey of child welfare services in the District, and Mrs. Harry S. Bernson, president of the Council of Social Agencies

A. A. U. W. Group Hears Mary Beard, Nursery Leader

Miss Mary Beard, national director of public health nursing for the American Red Cross, spoke informally yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the committee on the "Economic and Legal Status of Women of the American Association of University Women." Miss Bertha Nienburg, assistant director of the women's bureau of the United States Department of Labor, heads the group.

Miss Beard is considered the mother of university nursing schools. As an officer in the research division of the Rockefeller Foundation she was instrumental in awakening the interest of the foundation to the need of nursing schools, which resulted in its giving money to colleges to establish nursing schools, including a $1,000,000 grant to Yale University to establish the College School of Nursing.

Zeta Tau Alpha Will Honor Faith Baldwin

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha, on the evening of February 24, will hold a reception in honor of Faith Baldwin, writer, who has been chosen as speaker for the eighth annual luncheon of the Pan-hellenic Association of Washington, the following day. The reception will be in the East Room of the Hotel Mayflower from 9 to 11 p. m.

Mrs. Lucile Roberts, grand second vice president of Zeta Tau Alpha, who will represent Zeta Tau Alpha at the Eastern Regional Conference of the National Panhellenic Association at its first Washington meeting, will also be an honor guest on this occasion. Invitations have been issued to the chapter presidents and Panhellenic delegates of the 23 sororities included in the Panhellenic Association of Washington, and to the Zeta Tau Alpha chapter delegates attending the Eastern Regional Conference.

Miss Baldwin was an honor initiate of Zeta Tau Alpha at its biennial convention in Swampscott, Mass., in June, 1937, when this honor was also bestowed on Judge Ellen K. Raedy, of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia. The two honor initiates became close friends at the Swampscott meeting, and Miss Baldwin has invited Judge Raedy and Miss Beatrice Clephane to dine with her prior to the reception.

The receiving line at the reception will include Miss Baldwin, Mrs. Roberts, Judge Raedy, Mrs. Leighton Johnstone, president of the Panhellenic Association of Washington; Mrs. Marion Withrow, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha, and Mrs. Elizabeth Steinko, Panhellenic Chapter delegate.

Miss Clephane is in charge of reservations, and it is expected that more than 100 members of Zeta Tau Alpha will attend.

Mrs. Dunbar Speaks at Chevy Chase

Urges Woman's Club To Expand Program; Concert Arranged

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, addressed the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday on "Opportunity Begets Responsibility." Mrs. Dunbar told the women the future of their club and of the woman's club movement was up to them.

The national federation depends on each of the 14,553 clubs which comprise it, she said, and urged better training in club life, a wider variety of activities and objectives and an effort to help build the community.

"We must think for ourselves instead of drifting," declared the federation president.

Mrs. Dunbar was introduced by Mrs. Joseph Travers Maguire, club president. Mrs. B. Peyton Whelan, president of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Hugh Butler, teacher of public speaking, were also guests and were seated on the platform.

Fannie Mae Henbest played a group of piano solos. There was also an exhibition pictures by Alexander Clayton, who instructs a group from the art department each week.

The club, at its business meeting, voted $60 to the foundation fund of the general federation. It also approved a recommendation for an increase in the teachers' pay in the State of Maryland.

Announcement was made of a concert being sponsored by the music department Monday night with Fay Ferguson, pianiste, as the artist.

Academy Alumnae Plan Card Party

The Alumnae Association of the Academy of the Immaculate Conception will hold its annual card party and dance tomorrow at the Wardman Park Hotel, with Miss Kathleen B. Baker as general chairman.

New patrons added to the list include the Rev. John K. Cartwright, D. D., Harry Wheaton Howard, Mr. and Mrs. J. Aubrey Abell, Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, Miss Julia Toomey, Mr. and Mrs. Ferrand A. Walker, Mrs. Joseph W. McCann, Miss Margaret T. Kane, Mrs. Bernard F. Locraft, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Lyons, Miss Thomas J. Fitzgerald, Miss Josephine Hillyard, Miss Helen M. U. S. Has Much To Learn From Latins, Woman Reports

Commissioner Winslow Cites School 'Flying Unit' as Example of Progress Shown by Our Sister Americas

This country has much to learn from those in Latin America, Miss Mary Winslow, newly appointed United States representative on the Inter-American Commission of Women, told members of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington yesterday, addressing them at a luncheon meeting at which she was guest of honor. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins also was an honor guest at the affair, which was given at the Admiral, 1640 Rhode Island avenue, headquarters of the club.

"We will not be in the position of reporting to them on the success of experiments made in this country," said Miss Winslow of the Latin countries. "They have as much to teach us as we have to teach them. It is enormously stimulating to envision the interchange of ideas on what we all are doing."

Educational Works In Mexico Cited

She cited as examples of progress being made in the other countries, the "flying units" which go into communities in Mexico to set up schools. The teachers live with the people, studying every aspect of community life and training leaders in whose charge to leave the educational project when it has been established. In Ecuador, a somewhat similar plan is carried out in health work.

"We do not realize," she said, "how much they are doing that is like work being carried on here or in advance of it." She added that women of the United States should have contact with the women leaders in South America, who are members of the chamber of deputies of their countries, judges and authorities in scientific fields.

The present set-up of the Inter-American Commission makes it of more importance than in its original status as an autonomous body, she said, tracing its history and accomplishments. "This is the first time women, as women, have been recognized by a group of governments as an important and integral part of an effort to promote harmonious relations between countries."

Commission Studies Women's Problems

The commission, she explained, is charged with a permanent study of problems of American women and to act in an advisory capacity to the Pan American Conference, held every five years.

Miss Perkins, speaking briefly on Miss Winslow's appointment, said it was great luck that there was some one available for the appointment equipped by a background of training, experience and sincerity of interest as Miss Winslow. More and more, she said, women want to be sure that women who know and care about the subject with which they have to deal are appointed to such positions.

Other distinguished guests' included Dr. Warren Kelchner, secretary general of the Lima conference, and connected with the division of American republics; Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters; Mrs. Ruth Shipley,

MRS. WILLIAM P. BYRNE was elected president of Seventy-Fifth Club yesterday at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Allan Ellender, 2133 Sixteenth street. She is the wife of Representative Byrne, of New York.

Other officers for the year include Mrs. Lester Hill of Alabama, Mrs. Dudley White of Ohio, Mrs. James Hughes of Delaware and Mrs. Lawrence Arnold of Illinois, vice presidents; Mrs. Edmund H. Rees of Kansas, secretary, and Mrs. Boren, of Oklahoma, treasurer.

Mrs. Byrne will entertain the officers and committee chairmen at luncheon at her home next Wednesday to make plans for the season. Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, of California, heads the committee on hospitality; Mrs. John R. Murdock, of Arizona, on arrangements, and Mrs. Clyde H. Smith, of Maine, publicity.

"Washington, Founder of the Nation's Capital," was the subject of a radio talk given yesterday under the auspices of the District D. A. R. by Ernest Humphrey Daniel, whose wife is president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs. Among other things he emphasized was the fairness with which Washington dealth with owners of the land he desired as a site for the Capitol and other Government buildings.

MISS HELEN ENGLEKING, fashionist for a Washington department store, addressed the Soroptimist Club on "Fashions" yesterday at its weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel. There were also vocal solos by Mrs. Bertha Henderson, accompanied by Mrs. Jewell Downs, and Mrs. Jean Bennett, president of the club, presided.

Among the guests were Mrs. Lucile Cohan, of WJSV, who was entertained by Miss Leanor Lee, and Miss Beulah Drake, of the school for crippled children.

THE SOROPTIMIST CLUB of Montgomery County will have its monthly dinner meeting at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club Monday with Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department, as speaker.

MAJ. ERNEST W. BROWN, of the Police Department, spoke yesterday before the Zonta Club of Washington at its weekly luncheon at the Y. W. C. A., showing colored motion pictures of the Boys Club camp and talking on the organiation and its value to the community. He was introduced by Miss Emma T. Hahm, club president.

There will be no luncheon next week because of Wednesday falling on February 22, a holiday, and also because of the Intra-City dinner set for next Saturday.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

WE CAN'T bear to hear the truth when it hurts, or to tell it either. So even though you may be definitely overweight your friends will rally around and assure you that you are only plump and that "you are looking so well!"

Can you imagine forgiving anyone who brutally agreed with you when you said, tentatively and hoping for denials, that you were too heavy? It seems doubtful. We all have our share of vanity and overweight makes any woman sensitive. No friend of yours would—if she were in her right mind—venture to remind you that only a few years back you had a beautiful figure and were the envy of most of the women you knew, but that you had changed considerably.

And if you walked up to me right now and demanded the truth, I feel pretty sure that I would hedge. I might not be able to look you in the eye, but I would probably tell you that you have a large frame and are therefore entitled to a bit of extra weight.

But at this distance, and sustained by the impersonal viewpoint that is possible only with avoirdupois en masse, the truth seems the really kind thing. You do not look as well as you might and the chances are that you would be happier with less weight.

This does not apply to the woman who is 4 or 5 pounds above her quota. It is directed to the woman who is so overweight that she wants to be told she is not. But don't ask your friends! You can find out for yourself . . . the most you should weigh, even though you do have a large frame, is 110 pounds for the first 5 feet of height, with an extra 5½ pounds for each inch by which your height exceeds 5 feet.

Now that you know the truth, are you more than pounds over the the maximum normal? And, if so, have you had a doctor check you over recently? This is a good time to pay him a visit. You will find that he is in favor of weight reduction, too, for excess weight is regarded as a health hazard.

Don't Have a Cut-and-Dried Dining Room

by "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

Many a meal would be a lot pleasanter, many a family would be less likely to rush through their meals, if the family dining room didn't present such a formal appearance. Color can do a great deal, and even if your wall paper is patterned, your draperies though plain can be colorful. Place a large mirror on the wall where it will reflect a bit of outdoors. A charm shelf at the window, with growing plants, will help . . . or a plant stand in an otherwise unused corner. Get away from the notion that the conventional 10-piece suite is all that is needed, and you'll soon find your room developing a definite aura that both your family and friends enjoy.

Consult "Mary Annette" or any of our other Decorators, at any time, without obligation or cost to you . . . or, if you prefer an appointment, call NAtional 5100, Branch 500.

Woman Tree Expert Takes Up New Career at 70 to Keep Busy

MRS. D. PRISCILLA EDGERTON

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

As a general rule, Government employes—military as well as civilians—do not remain at work right up to the date of their retirement. In most instances they have a certain amount of leave to which they are entitled enabling them to step down from active service anywhere from a few days to several weeks ahead of schedule.

Mrs. D. Priscilla Egerton, a writer in the Forest Service's division of information and education, was no exception to the rule. Directed to retire on November 30, 1938, because of the 70-year law, she used her accrued leave to quit in advance of that date—in order to embark that much sooner upon a new job for the United States Forest Service and the Society of American Foresters. She is the second woman honored with an associate membership in this group.

It offers no compensation.

Starts Brand New Career

Mrs. Edgerton, a soft spoken, scholarly mannered daughter of a Yorkshireman and a South Carolinian, is starting a brand-new career as a research collaborator tracing the history of the American forestry movement. It is a tremendous project but one, she emphasizes, in which she is playing only a minor role—just one of the many collaborators in many parts of the country gathering data to the end that the most comprehensive and authoritative work of its kind may be written some day.

Confidentially, though, she has a hobby which interests her as much, maybe more, as her collaborator's job. It is still another sleuthing operation, accumulating information pertaining to the forests' contributions to activities of man since history began. "I became interested in the subject a year or so ago," says Mrs. Edgerton. "And I'm very glad I did. It is essential to one's happiness to have a hobby and this is mine, learning how the forest has influenced and advanced civilization."

Already she has prepared detailed outlines for the booklets she hopes to write, one on the changing parts forests have played in man's activities, another on their significance as natural barriers, territorial boundaries and as highways of progress, another on their role in religious and cultural developments.

But this is not her first attempt at authorship. Her latest work, "Famous Trees," sold 20,000 copies last summer. Her bulletin, "The Forest, a Handbook for Teachers," was a "best seller" a decade or so ago. She has written various other booklets of an educational nature.

In 1927, after 18 years in the Department of Agriculture, Mrs. Edgerton resigned to go to Mississippi as a forestry educational worker for the State. During the next three years she gathered material for the book, "Southern Forests," which was adopted by the State textbook commission, readopted in 1934.

Mrs. Edgerton returned to Washington in 1930 and worked in the division of information and education of the Forest Service from that time until her "retirement."

Born in England

To pay due respect to chronology, though, it should have been mentioned before now that she was born in Yorkshire, England, and came to this country at the age of 5 upon the death of her father. Charleston, S. C., had been her mother's home and it was there that Mrs. Edgerton was reared, educated and married. She taught school before her marriage and, shortly after the death of her husband, entered Federal service in 1908. Her first post was in the Geological Survey but she transferred to Agriculture after a few months.

Director F. A. Silcox of the Forest Service wrote Mrs. Edgerton, when she retired, to compliment her on her record as a teacher, writer and feminist. He concluded: "It is the hope of all of us that you may have many happy active years for continued achievement."

Whether there will be "many years" is up to Providence but it's a safe wager that as long as they last Mrs. Edgerton will make them happy, active and filled with achievement.

Mrs. Edgerton lives in the Ontario Apartments.

Collins Opens New Inquiry At Gallinger

Hires Investigator; Ruhland Opposes Randolph on Return To Old Regime

Another investigation of Gallinger Hospital was launched yesterday while debate over results of investigations already made waxed hotter in official circles.

Chairman Ross Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations has hired Richard Mackenzie, who investigated the hospital last year for the Budget Bureau, to repeat the performance, The Post learned.

Reduction of the authority and salaries of five resident physicians was proposed by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee in a letter to Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

Dr. Ruhland "Astounded"

Dr. Ruhland was "astounded" by Randolph's proposal as a means of settling the year-old feud between local medical schools and the Health Department.

Gallinger's need for a "change in service," Dr. Ruhland said, would be revealed by a study of hospital records before the five physicians were appointed. The question of "destroying or disturbing the service which has just been established at Gallinger by the addition of the five physicians referred to," he said, "has decidedly another side to it."

Last week Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, and the Very Rev. Arthur O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, whose medical schools supply visiting physicians at the hospital, discussed the situation with Commissioner Hazen. Hazen, after their meeting, suggested they and Dr. Ruhland arrange "an agreeable settlement" and disclosed his belief the schools should have supervision of the hospital's departments.

Conferred With Randolph

Dr. Ruhland said yesterday he had not yet met with the university presidents, though they discussed the state of affairs earlier this week with Randolph.

Since June 30, 1938, when supervision of the departments was taken over by the five Health Department physicians, there has been no definite understanding as to the relative position of the visiting staff and the resident physicians.

"I am glad to note," Dr. Ruhland added, "that Mr. Collins is asking for a further investigation of Gallinger. This should go thoroughly into the records of that institution before as well as since the addition of the new full-time staff men. That record will disclose why the change in service was necessary and is, in my judgment, indispensable."

Citing dissatisfaction with the new administrative system, inaugurated this fiscal year, Randolph, in his letter, suggested control of the five departments in the hospital be returned to the voluntary medical and surgical staffs from George Washington and Georgetown Universities.

The charge, he said, would eliminate friction that has arisen between the full-time resident physicians and the 130 part-time physicians and surgeons.

To Act as Assistants

Randolph said he understood the resident physicians were intended to serve as assistants to the department heads at the hospital but that actually they have supplanted them.

He also expressed surprise that the positions were created in the 1939 District supply act when not recommended by the United States Public Health Service or the District Medical Society.

Representative Collins said the positions were set up with the agreement of both the House and Senate sub-committees. He declined to comment on the Randolph protest.

The House District Committee chairman suggested to Dr. Ruhland that the five resident physicians, who draw $5,600 a year, might be reduced to salaries of $2,600 or $1,800 a year, thus placing them definitely in the role of assistants rather than administrators.

At a brief House District Committee meeting yesterday Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson, former Democratic National Committee woman for the District, made a plea for modern equipment at Gallinger for use in the treatment of cancer.

D. C. Held 'At Mercy' Of Congress

Taxed Without Representation, Sefton Darr Tells Chevy Chase Citizens

Without proper representation, District taxpayers are "at the mercy of whatever assessments, levies or impositions Congress might care to enact," Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association, told the Chevy Chase Citizens Association last night. Darr is chairman of the association's law and legislation committee.

Herbert C. Wood, speaking for the Citizens' Committee for Fair Taxation, urged the group to request an income tax for the District. The citizens refused to change their decision, made last month, favoring a general sales tax.

In another resolution, the association unanimously condemned legislation before Congress which they said would do away with vaccination for school children.

Rep. Nichols Speaks

"Help better your community and you will better yourself," Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, told 250 members of the American University Citizens Association, who attended the "Get Together Banquet" at the Brighton Hotel last night.

Nichols urged the members to "try with all their hearts" to aid their "small city" in every way possible to make it a better place to live in. He promised large gathering if they followed his request their community would be a better place to live in.

The guests were greeted by a welcoming committee who introduced each member individually as "your neighbor and mine." Miss Marion Maxwell, violinist, played "Auld Lang Syne" as the guests left.

Demand D. C. Vote

Opposition to the Griffenhagen report because it fails to recommend suffrage for District residents was voiced last night by the executive committee of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

The group also went on record against the appointment of non-residents to posts in the District government and commended Senator King, of Utah, for his vote against confirmation of Representative Goldsborough, of Maryland, for the post of judge of the District Court here.

Pastors Open Annual 6-Day Church School

Christian Education Sessions Are Launched At Calvary Baptist

Pastors, Sunday School officers and teachers and other religious leaders last night joined in launching the annual six-day School of Christian Education at Calvary Baptist Church.

Among them were J. Quinter Miller, field secretary, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; the Rev. Eddy L. Ford, director of religious education, Foundry Methodist Church; Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of the host church, who greeted the students and faculty; Dr. John F. Noffsinger, director of the National Home Study Council; Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary, the Washington Federation of Churches; Dr. John L. Mixon, head of the social welfare department, the federation; Dr. Charles E. Resser, president of the D. C. Sunday School Association, and others.

Sponsored by the D. C. Sunday School Association and the Federation of Churches, the curriculum includes courses on Jesus and His teachings, the church and social work, Christian worship, councils of religious education and their work and specialization.

Classes meet daily, with exception of this Sunday at 7:30 p. m.

Capital News In Brief

Mrs. Mary A. Hall will be 99 years old today and she wants only one thing for her birthday. She wants to find a friend.

Mrs. Hall hasn't seen this friend for years; she isn't sure she lives in Washington any more. But she is sure that if the newspapers print a story about her birthday, her friend will see it and come to see her at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary J. Vermillion, 3115 Hiatt place northwest, where they'll have a birthday dinner tonight.

The friend is a Mrs. Everett. Mrs. Hall doesn't remember her first name, though she was the wife of Mrs. Hall's pastor many years "out in Kansas."

Memory Solves Theft

Last Monday night Private V. V. Holcombe, of the Eighth Precinct, spotted a car with a man and woman sitting in it near the Giant Food Store, in the 4500 block of Wisconsin avenue northwest. The man told the officer, he had motor trouble and was waiting for a mechanic. So Holcombe left him to his trouble.

Next day, the manager of the store told police his store had been robbed of $122. Holcombe started looking for the man he had seen in the parked car the night before.

After a two-day search, Holcombe found his man. He was in the store that was robbed, working as a clerk.

"I never forget a face," said Holcombe when he walked into the station house with his prisoner.

Cuban Thanks U. S. for Aid At Maine Rites

Embassy Aide Speaks On Anniversary of Battleships Sinking

Sacrifice of the 266 men who lost their lives in the explosion of the battleship Maine 41 years ago "illuminates today with an unextinguishable flame the happy reality of Cuba's freedom," Dr. Jose T. Baron, minister counselor of the Cuban Embassy, declared yesterday after memorial exercises before the Maine mast in Arlington Cemetery.

Dr. Baron, who laid a wreath from the Cuban government, recalled that since 1898 "wars and catastrophes have devastated many countries and innumerable new victims have offered their lives for the cause of liberty and justice, the only bases for a lasting civilization."

Praising Americans who fell in the war with Spain, he said, "they died under a flag carried not with the desire of perpetuating it over a foreign land, but so that the flag of a sister nation might wave forever, proclaiming thus the nobility and generosity of her liberators."

Representative Martin F. Smith, of Washington, read a description of the sinking of the Maine from the personal narrative of Capt. Sigsbee, who commanded the battleship.

More than 100 persons heard the addresses in the Fort Myer Riding Hall after the ceremonies at the Maine mast. Wreaths were laid on behalf of President Roosevelt and numerous patriotic organizations.

The United Spanish War Veterans, sponsors of the ceremonies, honored their commander in chief, Thomas W. Payne, at a banquet in the Mayflower Hotel last night. Representative Smith, who is chairman of the House Pensions Committee, and Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, told the 530 members of the United Veterans and their Auxiliary that legislation is pending before the present Congress to increase the benefits to Spanish War veterans' widows and dependents.

Fire Truck Going To Hospital Has Double Collision

Answering a fire alarm at Columbia Hospital, a fire truck driven by Paul P. Ballenger, of No. 23 Engine Company, last night collided with a laundry truck and caromed into a parked car at Twenty-second and G streets northwest. No one was injured.

The alarm was turned in at the hospital when backfire from a furnace blew out a basement window.

3 D. C. Women To Participate in Oberlin Forum

Three Washington women will participate in a symposium of vocations to be held Friday and Saturday at Oberlin College.

RUTH LEISERSON

They are Miss Louise Stitt, the chairman of the minimum wage board, Women's Bureau; Mrs. Elwood Street, chairman of the National Council for Mothers and Babies, and Ruth B. Leiserson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Leiserson, of 3210 Thirty-fourth street northwest. Miss Lieserson is a junior at the college this year and chairman of publicity for the symposium.

Last Man's Club Hears Rep. Bolles Rip Defense Plan

Happily roaring "Hinky Dinkey Parlez Vous," Washington's first Last Man's Club held its second meeting last night at the Hotel 2400 and again dedicated its bottle of choice Chianti to the man who survives them all.

Organized a year ago by 100 World War veterans on the pattern of the Civil War clubs of the same name, its members expect to pass the bottle of wine from president to president until all but the last man is gone. Then he, president and club in one, will drink the bottle dry. Last night the bottle passed to possession of Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired, incoming president.

Representative Stephen Bolles (Republican), Wisconsin, honoary chairman and principal speaker, assailed the Administration's defense program as a "rotten bill" and labeled fortification of Guam "the silliest thing I ever heard of." He urged a National Guard "well trained and well equipped."

Lithuanians to Mark Nation's Founding

The twenty-first anniversary of Lithuania's independence will be observed at a meeting of the American Lithuanian Society of Washington at 8:15 p. m. today in the music hall of Catholic University. Povilas Zadeikis, Lithuanian Minister, will speak.

The Rev. Dr. John Weisengonff will be master of ceremonies. Dr. John F. Brazinsky is chairman of the committee in charge.

Youth Finds He's Indian, Sues for 'Hidden' Oil Cash

A bizarre tale of concealed identity and Oklahoma oil wealth was told in a petition filed in District Court yesterday by Isaac S. Mason, jr., 136 W street northwest, who declared he but recently learned he is a half-blood Indian and entitled to $175,000 which his father had kept a secret from him.

The father, Isaac S. Mason, sr., 1823 Fourth street northwest, was charged with keeping from him all knowledge of his real mother—a Creek freedwoman—and of the property holdings she left him. When he became 21 years of age, two years ago, Mason declared, his father had him sign many papers. He has learned since, he said, that by signing them he gave away Oklahoma property now under lease to an oil company and also more than $25,000 that had come in from the company at the rate of $76 a month.

Before his suspicions were aroused by so much paper signing, he said, he did not know his father was serving as his guardian and believed the father's present wife, Mrs. Beatrice Mason, to be his real mother.

Dies in Automobile

Found unconscious in an automobile at Second and H streets northeast, yesterday, Carl W. Enling, 57, of 4115 Eighteenth street northeast, died before medical aid could be summoned.

An autopsy will be performed today by Coroner A. Magruder Macdonald.

Three Goals By Hutchins Clinch Game

5,000 See George Washington Lose 38-36 Lead in Last Few Minutes of Play

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 15.—George Washington's Colonials, tired after a lengthy road trip, were unable to cope with the mad Magicians of Bradley Tech here tonight, losing 46-38, in a game closer than the final score indicates.

A crowd of 5,000 rabid fans watched Bill Reinhart's five take the lead numerous times in the second half, leading 38 to 36 with six minutes to go. But then the keen eye of Capt. Bob Faris wore out and Bradley shot ahead. Jack Butterworth, who guarded Tech's famous star, Dar Hutchins, in better fashion than he's been held all year, tired, and Dar sank three baskets to ice the game.

Faris made four of five tries in the opening minutes, and G. W. U. led, 13 to 8. Garber, not getting any openings, failed to score in the first half, taking only two shots. Huchins also bottled Butterworth, but Reds Auerbach came through for the Colonials, making two. Bradley, 19 to 16, at the half.

After Tech took a 26-to-22 lead, Butterworth and Garber tied the score and Faris, on a set shot, sent his team into the lead. Ted Panish, Tech shifty guard, scored from under, but Faris put his team ahead again on a sleeper.. Butterworth's free throw and Silkowitz' fancy shot gave the Colonials at 34-to-31 lead, but three gratis tosses and Osborn's short shot gave Bradley a 36-to-34 advantage.

Eddie Amendola made two in a row and the Colonials again had the lead. Carl Schunk, elusive Tech forward, hit on a fast break, and Hutchins sent Tech ahead with a hook shot. Schunk hit again, and in the final minute Hutchins scored from under and tapped in a rebound.

Bradley made 18 out of 82 tries while George Washington made 18 out of 74 shots. Twelve fouls were called on G. W. U., 6 on Bradley.

Washington's Ringmen Down Richmond, 5-3

The cream of Washington and Richmond amateur ringmen, Golden Gloves champions of their respective cities, struck a few blows for sweet charity last night at Turner's Arena, with the host team batting out a 5-3 victory over the visitors.

An audience of some 1,400 fans turned out for the festivities, contributing approximately $900 to the President's Birthday Ball fund for the fight on paralysis and it proved to be a worthwhile investment.

147 pounds—Nick Mancini (Washington) defeated Billy Newman.

HEAVYWEIGHT—Jimmy De Chard (Washington) knocked out Cowboy Jones (1 minute 35 seconds of the second round).

Tom Farr Engaged To American Coed Who Gave Him Ring

Southampton, Eng., Feb. 15 (AP). Tommy Farr, British heavyweight boxer, bashfully confided to interviewers today that he was engaged to an American college girl—a brunette.

"I suppose I cannot keep it back any longer," said the Welshman as he arrived in England from the United States aboard the liner Queen Mary. "Yes, I am engaged, but I would not tell her name even for £100,000.

"All I can say is that she is 20 years old and is American of English extraction and is still at college."

Farr said the girl gave him a diamond ring.

Kessler Takes 'Good Little Man' Any Time

Little Tech Coach Cites Own Squad As an Example

Bruce Kessler, the cheerful little man who coaches basketball at McKinley high, has his own idea about the "good little man—good big man" argument. He'll take the little man every time.

His friends say it's because he's less than five-feet-ten himself that he favors the diminutive type of cager, but he denies this. In defense he calls off a lengthy list of tiny basketers who have made District basketball history in the past, and then points with pride to the tiny team he plans to put up against Woodrow Wilson's lanky cagemen in Tech's all-important battle for a place in the title playoff Friday.

"There are only three six-footers on that team—Charley Kendall, Vic DeLeon and Buddy Edwards," he says." The other seven men on the first string scale under five-ten. They're not only short, but for the most part thin. The average weight of the squad—including the six-footers—is probably nearer to 130 than 150 pounds."

"As long as I've got one tall man to take the ball off the backboard, I'll gladly fill out the rest of the team with shorter fellows," Kessler continues. "Seems like they get around a lot better than the stringy ones."

Kessler's important tall man this season, a giant among midgets, is Charley Kendall, a red-headed honor student with a broad drawl. He's one of the most popular men on the squad. He was also president of the Tech student body organization—the G. O.—until his term expired this month.

Kendall learned his basketball and made a fair name for himself at Langley Junior High before he came to Tech. There his all-around academic and athletic ability earned him the American Legion Honor Award.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 15.—Future book odds on the crippled Seabiscuit in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap jumped sharply today and the gallant stake king was declared out of the San Carlos Handicap Saturday in an announcement that was a mere formality.

But whether the mighty Seabiscuit has ended his brilliant racing career remained unanswered and extremely doubtful.

Tired, sleep-needing Charles S. Howard, owner of the "big horse" of the turf, clung grimly to hopes that his thoroughbred star again would carry the Howard silks into battle, that Seabiscuit would answer the bugle for his third crack at the $100,000 Santa Anita, March 4.

Others were not so hopeful. They expressed the opinion the ankle that went bad yesterday in Seabiscuit's first race since the triumph over War Admiral last November 1 was a fatal blow to Howard's dream of victory in the "hundred grander"—victory that would make the 'Biscuit the biggest all-time money winner in turf history.

Dr. J. M. Peters, Howard's veterinarian, after another examination, said the injury was "not as bad" as first feared. He admitted 'Biscuit was "palpably lame," but beyond that would hazard no expression.

Future book operators, who saw Seabiscuit—virtually a three-legged horse—beaten in track record time by 2¼ lengths yesterday by Today, and then limp off the track, boosted the price on the favored Howard candidate in the Santa Anita.

The 'Biscuit was three to one. He can be had now at ten to one.

Bill to Establish D. C. Track Appears Due for Stiff Fight

The Sacks bill to establish a District race track yesterday appeared destined for another stiff fight in the House District Committee as Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, announced he would again take the lead in opposing the proposal.

Bates has twice before led the attack on similar bills sponsored by Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, former chairman of the House District Committee.

"It's not on moral grounds that I am against legalized racing in the District," Bates explained, "but it's because I believe a race track in the Capital would prove to be an economic calamity. I've seen what happens when a race track gets a foothold as it has done in Rhode Island and other sections of New England."

Bates is a member of the Judiciary sub-committee to which the Sacks bill will be referred.

Another past opponent of the District race track bill, who is expected to join Bates in a renewed effort to kill the measure, is Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, another member of the District Committee.

Bates disclosed that W. C. Murphy, who said he holds the option on the Benning Race Track tract, had called on him twice with regard to the race track bill. Bates said he told him that he would fight the measure if it were reintroduced.

Mann Fights Knox

Bill Asks 'Totes' For All Maryland Mile Race Tracks

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 15 (AP).—Embarrassment for mile race track operators was contained in a bill introduced in the lower House today.

Leon Abramson (Democrat, Fourth Baltimore District), proposed to require all one-mile race tracks in the State to install improved totalisator computation devices to show the constant change of pari-mutuel odds.

"Only Pimlico has installed a 'tote,'" Abramson said, "the race-track operators wheedled a 1 per cent increase in their 'take' from the racing commission last year. It might be pertinent to inquire why they haven't installed the totes, certainly the improvement most desired by the betting public."

Bernard Fisher, Race Track Employe, Dies

Miami, Fla., Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Bernard Fisher, 45, of New York, employe in the office of the racing secretary at Hialeah Park, today died of a heart attack shortly after he had reported to work. He had served for years in the racing secretary's office at Bowie, Md.

Cardinals Lose To Baltimore Quintet, 42-38

Continuing their rapid return to normalcy, Catholic University's Cardinals managed to lose their third straight and their tenth game in eleven starts last night by bowing to a stubborn Baltimore University five, 42-38.

In the semi-privacy of the spacious Brookland gym, Fod Cotton's boys resumed their comeback to the form that netted them seven straight losses before a victory over Loyola interrupted the perfect streak. But for a time some 300 loyal fans had grave doubts as to the outcome.

For Baltimore proved a very obstinate sort of foe. And it was not until late in the second half that the Bees, finally convinced that it was their fate to win, put on the clinching rally to chalk up their eleventh triumph in fifteen games.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 15.—Merle Thorpe, of Washington, and George Abbott, of New York, N. Y., finished in a tie for low net honors at 79 in the third day's play of the 72-hole medal play handicap golf tournament of the Artists and Writers Golf Association at the Seminole Club here today.

Lopez Signs As Coach of Rob Ortiz

Cuban Catcher Will Act as Interpreter As Well, Language Baffles Harris

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 15.—Suspense—oddles of it, so thick it is causing hearts to thump—has hit the Washington training camp hard. In an unsealed dither are the Nats' bosses.

The reason—one Roberto Ortiz, a Cuban pitcher who looks no more like a Cuban than you do. He's the perfect antithesis of the islander type. Towering six feet three inches and weighing 205 pounds, he might have come down from the mountains of Tennessee.

Can he pitch? Manager Bucky Harris and Owner Clark Griffith, a couple of stark realists not given to enthusing over tyros, are permitting themselves to think that he can. If he can, indeed, pitch, then Senor Ortiz will be the central figure in the most fantastic chapter of spring training history. He has played only one game of baseball in his life. His pitching career is only a week old. But already they are saying he throws a ball as hard as Bob Feller. I saw him work this morning. The plate is no place for a faint-hearted batter when Ortiz cuts loose. He's faster than Joe Krakauskas, the fast-ball specialist of the Nats.

He's as green as the deep-hued ivy. He doesn't know how to wind up. He doesn't know how to stand, and he doesn't know much about gripping the ball but he throws hard. His ball is alive. It gets down the alley with terrific speed and it hops. He has more sheer speed than most big league pitchers. He got his speed, of course, from his prodigious strength. Years of swinging a machette in Cuba's cane fields have given him shoulder and arm muscles of steel. Yet he is loose and fluent.

If Ortiz learns how to utilize his speed, if he develops control—even the possibility that he will, finds Bucky Harris beside himself with delight. He envisions Ortiz as the most spectacular rookie since Bob Feller startled the pitching world.

Until he learns definitely if Oritz is intelligent enough to absorb teaching, Harris will continue in a dither, impatient to impart some pitching tricks to the big Cuban and to discover how readily he can learn, Harris has already taken steps.

He has telegraphed Al Lopez, star Cuban catcher of the Boston Bees, to come to Orlando from his winter home at Tampa, Fla., and tutor Oritz whose language Lopez speaks.

Lopez has agreed, and Harris now seeks the permission of John Quinn, president of the Bees, who is expected to agree.

Where did Ortiz come from? Joe Cambria, Nat scout, with a penchant for picking up Cuban ball players found him in Cuba a month ago. Cambria was there bent on scouting a pitcher named Alexander. In Havana he learned about a young giant living 400 miles away. Cambria made the trip through the semi-wilderness and found Ortiz playing catch and one-knocker. There were not enough boys in the community for a regular ball game. Impressed by his size, and action, Cambria signed him.

Today they tried to teach Ortiz how to throw a curve. He couldn't manage it. He didn't know how to let the ball go. Harris tried to teach him, gave up in disgust. In English he berated Ortiz and the Cuban smiled widely. But the curve ball doesn't make any difference, says Harris. If Ortiz can get that fast one over the plate, that's all that will be necessary, according to the Nats' manager.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 15.—Ball players always could be divided into three classes if anyone were of a mind to divide them. Some are (1) born, to use the expression meaning that they are endowed with a heap of natural ability. Others are (2) developed, which entails painstaking care and much expense on the part of big league clubs, and others are (3) self-made, like Bucky Harris, who overcame the handicaps of lack of poundage and small hands.

POVICH

But now comes the ball player by political appointment. He walked into the Washington training camp this morning. He is the appointee of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana. And his name is John Green. Senator Wheeler has indorsed him as an infielder. It is something new in patronage. Young Green is, of course, from Montana.

A dozen other youths have come to Orlando for a tryout with the Nats, like young Green unsolicited and they were told to keep on moving by Trainer Mike Martin, who does not fancy having his locker rooms cluttered up with raw novices. But Green will stay for a while at least. Because, you see the senior Senator from Montana is sponsoring him. Mr. Wheeler happens to be a friend of Mr. William Richardson, vice president of the Washington club. There was the matter of a telephone call from Senator Wheeler to Mr. Richardson, and Mr. Richardson, who never had on a baseball uniform in his life, certified young green to Manager Bucky Harris as an infielder.

A Progressive Senator

It is entirely fitting that this new departure in political appointments be inaugurated by Senator Wheeler, who is a Progressive. It is, for him, something of an escape from the patronage restrictions he has been under since taking violent issue with Mr. Roosevelt on certain New Deal measures. What Senator Wheeler has begun, other Senators and Representatives who are not in favor with the White House might well emulate. Denied Federal patronage, they might appease their constituents with baseball appointments.

The trend might not disturb 15 of the 16 big league clubs which can view as remote the possibility that their teams might be packed with diligent party workers and heavy campaign contributors to the exclusion of guys who can knock the ball out of the lot. But it is a harrowing thought for the Washington Club. Because the Nats, like the other big league teams, are beholden to the Senators and Representatives in Washington.

When a Senator or Representative speaks, Mr. Clark Griffith always listens. Because he knows that it is within the power of Congress to revoke the Sunday baseball law which has proved so profitable to the Washington club. And in matters like the District horse racing bill to which Griffith is violently opposed, he is eager to have the solons on his side. Thus, the Nats are vulnerable if a Congressman is determined to place a jobless constituent.

5,000 Baseball Jobs

If young Green, perchance, does make good with the Nats, it might give the White House an idea. The long arm of the Administration might reach out and appropriate organized baseball. It could place a Federal commissioner in charge and open for Jim Farley a new lode of patronage jobs to be tapped. It would be no small item, either. There were, last season, 38 leagues in organized baseball, employing approximately 5,000 ball players.

Closing baseball appointments to Congressmen and Senators not on the White House's preferred list might help to keep party in line. At this writing when party members are in something of a revolt against the Administration, that would be no mean consideration. It would effectively check such moves as that of Senator Wheeler. Unless his appointments were cleared through the Democratic National Committee, he'd be wasting his time. Senator Wheeler has started something that could be very embarrassing for organized baseball. Should the game be placed under Federal supervision, gentlemen like Clark Griffith would be forced to junk their systems developed over a period of years. No longer would they be able to pick their own ball player. They would be at the mercy of folks in good standing with the Administration.

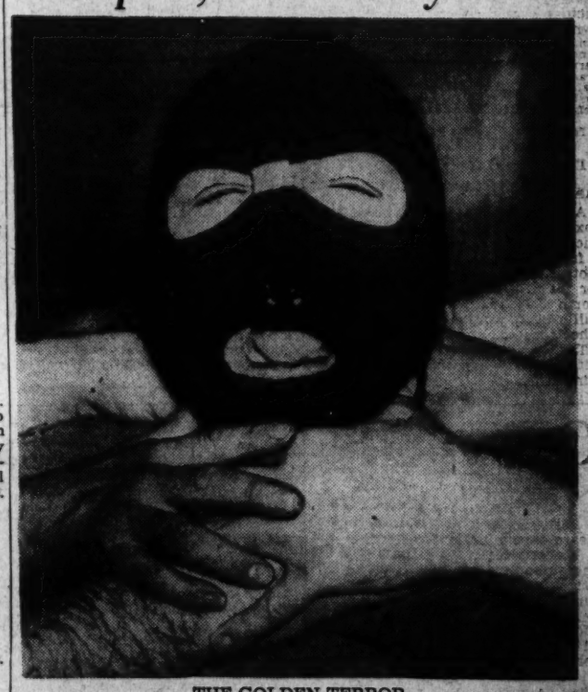
Ability No Requisite

To the heaviest campaign contributioners, would go of course, the big league jobs. The State party workers and the Young Democrat, or Young Republican, as the case may be, would be parceled out the class as minor league jobs. Baseball ability wouldn't make much difference. What would count would be: Who you knew?

The thing to be avoided by the Administration would be, of course, any necessity for confirmation of its appointments by Senate committees. Imagine the furore if when Mr. Roosevelt attempted to appoint to the Washington team a pitcher who could really pitch, at a time when the Nats and Yankees were in the thick of a pennant race, the Senators from New York termed Mr. Roosevelt's appointee "personally objectionable" to them!

It would open a new field too for baseball reporting. For instance we might read that the Nats lost a tough game to the Tigers in the ninth because Joe Zilch, who swung Michigan into the Democratic column the last election made a fancy stop and throw with the bases full to save the game for J. Horning Blow, the young pitcher making his first start for the Tigers since being recommended by a party scout who found him buying 10 plates for the Jackson Day dinner.

Terror, New Maryland World Champion, Meets McCoy Here



THE GOLDEN TERROR

Wearing a brand new crown atop his hooded head—the world championship—of Maryland, the Golden Terror returns to Turner's Arena tonight to tweak Bibber McCoy's nose and arouse the customer's ire in the feature bout of another wrestling card.

The Terror came into his new found glory Tuesday night at Baltimore, where he was scheduled to wrestle Jim Londos for the world championship. Londos, however, failed to appear, telegraphing from Philadelphia that he would not wrestle unless Jack Dempsey refereed the match. With Dempsey in Florida such an arrangement was impossible, and Promoter Ed Contos informed the 4,000 spectators present of his predicament, offering them refunds on their tickets.

The masked challenger, however, insisted on wrestling, and threw two opponents in less time than it takes to write this for the edification of the customers. He also claimed Londos' title by forfeit. Stanley Scherr, chairman of the State athletic commission, went into a huddle with other commission members at the ringside and emerged with a decision to give the Terror the title. Meanwhile, an inquiry is scheduled tomorrow to determine the cause of Londos' reluctance to meet the Terror, who had been treading on the Greek's heels for months trying to obtain a title match.

Hoyas Face Carnegie in Local Clash

Seek 11th Victory of Season; Schmitt and Stark Will Continue Scoring Struggle

By Jack Munhall.

With a first and last Eastern Conference basketball championship as their chief incentive for victory, Georgetown's unpredictable Hoyas tackle Carnegie Tech at Tech gymnasium tonight in a game that also can restore the Hilltop five to the top of the local heap.

Tied with George Washington at ten victories and six defeats for the leadership of the District, Georgetown is second in the conference standings, which read:

	W.	L.	P.	P.A.	Pct.
Carnegie Tech..	4	1	269	211	.800
Georgetown....	4	2	220	202	.750

Therefore, if the Hoys are able to avenge the 37-to-34 defeat suffered at Pittsburgh in their first meeting with the Tartans this season, they will take a slight but firm grip on the lead which they will be favored to retain the rest of the way.

This is the last year for the Conference, which has announced it will disband, although the teams will meet next season unofficially.

The preliminary to tonight's crucial game, starting at 7, is hardly less attractive, for it brings together the strong Georgetown frosh and their ever warm rivals, Maryland's Little Terps. Here again revenge will be a keen motive because the Georgetown yearlings dealt what is considered Maryland's best rookie five in many years its only setback of the campaign.

Although his Georgetown varsity was somewhat disappointing in its recent loss to Pittsburgh, which seriously reduced its chance for the championship, Coach Elmer Ripley plans to rely on the same boys who are compiling one of Georgetown's best court records.

At forwards will be Sharpshooting Johnny Schmitt and Ed Kurtyka, at center, blond Johnny McGowan, the sophomore sensation, and at guards, Joe Murphy and Irving Rizzi. Murphy, the Hoya captain, is to start his first game at a guard position.

An interesting sidelight should develop when G. U.'s Schmitt and Stark continue to fight it out for the individual scoring title. Although he has played in one more league game than Stark, Schmitt is close enough to be very uncomfortable should he have a "hot" night. The "Flying Dutchman" has 63 points and Stark, 68.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

New York, Feb. 15.—There are a lot of things on my chest, including a bad cold (I'm losing my grippe, it seems) and I might as well get one of them off.

VIDMER.

There's this matter of testimonial dinners. I'm fed up with them, to put it briefly. Not because they are boring, but because nine times out of ten they're simply a racket. It's really very interesting how a young man, with a good sales talk, can pick up quite a lot of loose change on a testimonial dinner.

First of all he picks his fall guy. It may be an actor or an athlete or an artist or even a prominent politician. The only requisite is that he is a celebrity of some sort with a name that the public quickly recognizes and that he is not averse to publicity.

Just for the purpose of illustration let's take Babe Ruth. Here is a perfect bit of bait. First we go to the Babe and tell him that there are a group of us who feel he should be honored by a testimonial dinner and what would be a suitable date? Presented properly, with the necessary amount of deference, it becomes impossible for the Babe to turn down the invitation. So he sets a date.

Use of a Name

The next thing to do is get a list of sponsors. This is practically a cinch. There are enough prominent men around willing to sponsor anything, just so long as they don't have to give any time, money or effort to the cause. They are glad to lend their names and have them printed on the letter heads of programs or menus. They don't even have to attend, but a list of a dozen or so names of sports writers or dramatic critics, producers and actors, or politicians is very enticing to the sucker trade. They think, besides Babe Ruth, they're going to see those other celebrities also.

So it is announced that a testimonial dinner will be given Babe Ruth, or whoever the victim happens to be, and the list of sponsors is displayed prominently with the announcement. You and I, whose names don't mean anything to the prospective purchasers of tickets, keep quietly in the background. We merely represent those sponsors who are putting on this dinner. In fact, we give the

Tech 32-23 Victor Over Gonzaga Five

Torrid Fourth Quarter Wins for McKinley; Walsh High Scorer

Gonzaga's Purple basketers lost their fourth consecutive game to a public high school team yesterday at Tech gym, when McKinley High came from behind in the last quarter to win, 32-23. It was Tech's eighth victory in 13 games this season.

As in many of its previous games, Gonzaga held its opponent exactly even for three periods but fell before a scoring streak in the stretch. After three quarters, Gonzaga was behind by only one point, 19-18, and with the opening of the last session it went quickly into a 21-19 lead with Freddy Rice's foul shot and Bill Counsilman's long field goal.

Buddy Edwards, reserve of the Manual Trainers, was sent into the game at that point, about 5 minutes before the end of the game, and immediately tied up the count. From then on it was Tech all the way. Lane O'Donnell, the Purple's tall center, scored the only two-pointer for Gonzaga, while Tech tallied 11 points.

Wakiva First Home In Race to Nassau

Nassau, Bahamas, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Wakiva, 69-foot white-hulled yawl, skippered by the veteran Harkness Edwards, of New York, was the first of a fleet of ten to cross the finish line tonight in the sixth annual Miami-to-Nassau race.

Because of time handicaps, based on overall length and sail area, however, Stormy Weather, piloted by Robert W. Johnson, of New York, was ahead of Wakiva on the basis upon which the winner of the race will be declared.

Eight other entries still were far at sea early tonight, but several were expected to finish later tonight. Although Wakiva and Stormy Weather already were in, the winner of the race, because of time corrections, still might be out on the course.

University Shop Retains Recreation League Command

The University Shop retained its slight lead in the Recreation League at the Recreation Alleys last night by taking the odd game from Shah & Shah, despite Abe Beavers' set of 380. Paul Perkins led the winners with 375.

The second-place American Window Cleaning Co. whitewashed Bell Clothiers as Paul Jarman rolled 409 and Hal Greenberg 386.

In other matches, Herzogs, paced by Astor Clarke's 393, took the odd game from the third-place Tucci Plumbers, while Allied Roofing Co., helped by Ed Cleary's 418, highest individual set of the night, won the deciding game from Sammy's Liquor Co. Harry Aiken's 415 was high for the losers.

Sammy's Liquor Store rolled high team game, 649, and high team set, 1,857.

Bankers' League

City Bank picked up a game to increase its lead to two full games in the Bankers' League at Arcadia Alleys last night by sweeping its set from Washington & Loan No. 2, while the second-place American Security and Trust lost one to National Savings.

Brewers, National Savings, posted high individual game of the evening, 145. Jim Bruen, Hibbs & Co., has best individual set, 377. Hamilton's 579 was high team game, and City Bank No. 1 rolled high team set, 1,685.

Interior League

Reclamation No. 1 hiked its Interior League lead to eight games at Columbia Alleys by taking three games from Survey No. 1 as Pat Collins led the attack with a game of 149 and set of 362.

Friendship League

International Business Machines increased its lead in the Friendship League at Silver Spring Alleys by sweeping a set from Wakefield Dairy as Jim Botler posted league season record with a set of 405.

Dome Oil won two from President's Valet. Bechncke was best for the winners with 337. Bond Bread grabbed the odd game from Walsh Motor Co., led by Mike Torney's set of 344.

Southeast League

Square Deal tied Quality for second place in the Southeast League at the Queen Pin Alleys by defeating it two games to one. George Honey, of Square Deal, had high set, 142, and Roger Doyle, also of the winners, rolled high game, 142. H. Brown's 340 set was high for the losers.

Bacas Bros., with George Barver's 149 and 355 leading their attack, won the deciding game from Shaffer's Flower Co. Barber's 149, high for the night, won him a special shirt prize. Richard La Bille was best for Shaffer's with a 353.

Darden's Restaurant won two from Capitol Hill Bowling Alleys. A. B. Price Florist Supply, with the aid of "Baldy" Baldwin's 352, won two from Peerless Bakers. Gus Placos was high for the Florists with 338.

Capitol Restaurant rolled high team game for the evening, 596, in taking the odd game from East Capitol Pharmacy.

Free-for-All Booked As C. U. Ring Feature

As a farewell gesture to the 1939 boxing season, Eddie LaFond, Catholic University coach, has arranged a free-for-all bout, involving three football players, as an added feature for Saturday night's match with North Carolina State. The bouts will ring down the curtain on another successful Cardinal campaign.

The combatants will be armed with one glove each, and will be blindfolded.

50 Pro Golfers Are Sent to Jail At New Orleans

New Orleans, Feb. 15 (AP).—Lacking hotel rooms, New Orleans put about 50 golfers in jail today.

Moving into town for the $10,000 Crescent City Open starting tomorrow, the linksmen were unable to find rooms so Mayor Robert Maestri ordered the criminal court building dormitories turned over to them. "Make the boys feel at home," his honor told the custodian.

OUT OF THE WEST

United Press Staff Writer.

Los Angeles, Feb. 15.—Seen or heard on the Western sports front:

Walter Hagen has landed on these shores again and is considering an exhibition series with John Montague . . . Montague's foreign invasion was a bust; he didn't win a thing. . . . The Haig enthusiastically approved one Catherine Shuster, 17-year-old Long Beach schoolmiss who recently shot a 72, as a coming wonder.

HAGEN

Speaking of the fairer sex, Hedy Lamarr of the movies established some sort of precedent at Santa Anita a couple of days ago. She crashed the press box, a feat unachieved by a woman previously. The turf writers were too, too willing to break the rule they established themselves when it came to Miss Lamarr . . . For top-hole entertainment, stop a moment and chat with Jack Roper, the wheelchair wheelhorse who will meet Joe Louis here in what is being advertised as a "world heavyweight championship" bout . . . Roper is waxing eloquent as to just how he intends to send Mr. Louis to the icebox with a left hook . . .

William Ziegler, jr., of New York and points East is one sad man. All last year he used a colt by the name of Our Mat as a workhorse for the great El Chico. The stable thought so little of Our Mat that he wasn't nominated for the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby. Now the youngster has become one of the best 3-year-olds in the West and there is no place for him to go . . . He will be named for the Kentucky Derby . . . The early birds of the baseball season are arriving. The Chicago Cubs will train again at Catalina Island, the Pittsburgh Pirates at San Bernardino, and the Chicago White Sox at Pasadena . . .

The Crosby-Disney-Howard interests are serious about their $1,250,000 Hollywood arena, to be known as the Sport Gardens. They have signed a lease on a 34-acre tract that cost $3,500,000. Once the plant is finished it will seat some 26,00 customers. It will be managed by Zach Farmer, the gent who staged the 1932 Olympic games here, and all sorts of the old pressure will be applied on Mike Jacobs for some genuine first-class fistic attractions . . .

DISNEY

The Vines-Budge tennis engagement here was a new high. Someone forgot the planks for the court and the boys were forced to play on ply-wood. The balls bounced hardly a foot and on occasions Mr. Budge looked like the Bambino swinging at a low one—and missing. They play again in Pasadena shortly and Budge says for one he will test the footing first . . . What has happened to Bronko Nagurski's wrestling career? . . . In a year or so start watching for the name of Georgie Crouch, a Negro lightweight hailed as the lad who can halt Henry Armstrong . . . if anybody ever does . . .

Everybody likes a winner and that goes double for the Southern California football team . . . at the midterm break last week practically every prep great in the Southwest jumped on the Howard Jones bandwagon and signed up for four years of study and football . . .

Halcyon Boy Routs Choices in Florida's Seminole Stake

Meade Rides $21.90 Shot At Hialeah

15,000 See Colt, in Maiden Victory, Beat Roman and 8 Others

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 15.—Halcyon Boy, an up and coming bay colt owned by B. N. Kane, Providence (R. I.) furniture man, blazed to a length and a half victory over J. E. Widener's favored Roman in the 3-furlong Seminole stakes, which attracted the cream of the male division's juveniles, here this afternoon. DeWitt Page's Maeace, coupled with Maetran, annexed the show, a half length behind. Halcyon Boy, ridden by the sensational Don Meade, earned a purse of $2,790. He sped home in 34 flat and returned $21.90 for two.

The largest week-day crowd of the meeting, close to 15,000, witnessed the second 2-year-old stake of the Miami Jockey Club's session. The Everglades stakes, for fillies, saw William Dupont's Fairy Chant victorious last Saturday.

Ten youngsters faced Starter George Cassidy, with Roman rated an even-money shot on the strength of a smashing triumph in his recent debut. The event was almost devoid of crowding, and Roman had no excuse. He was first away from his inside-post position, closely attended by Halcyon Boy and Exarch, Meade, scoring his fifty-fifth success of the meeting and his sixty-second of the year, hustled Halcyon Boy to the front as the field reached the half-way mark, while Roman was busy trying to dispose of Supreme Chance and Exarch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAADJA, $10.60, $5.10, $3.80; DARBY DU, $6.60, $5.20; SHOOTING SCOUT, $6.10.

NAADJA, away forwardly, went in near pursuit on the outside of the leaders in the early stages, assumed command on the stretch turn while racing wide and lost ground entering the stretch, was displaced from the lead at the furlong pole, but came again and wore DARBY DU down in the last strides. DARBY DU, compelled to be taken back frequently while racing on the inside in the opening half mile, secured clear passage entering the stretch, went to the front when placed to punishment, but faltered in the final drive. SHOOTING SCOUT and BEACON ROCK ran wide as a team in the final quarter mile, with the former on the inside and outstaying his opponent.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Grade C. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:33½. Winner, Snow White Stable's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DONNA LEONA, $6.20, $3.70, $2.70; FENG, $3.80, $3.10; NEIGHBOR, $3.20.

DONNA LEONA, on the outside and in close attendance of the pace from the start, took a short lead entering the stretch and, responding gamely when the real test came, outlasted FENG. The latter displayed keen speed while saving ground, made a game effort when placed to a drive, but could not keep stride with the winner. NEIGHBOR, going well up throughout, moved up boldly between the leaders turning into the stretch, gained steadily under punishment and was going fastest of all at the finish. SAUNDERSTOWN, in the thick of contention and saving ground the entire trip, faltered in the final furlong.

Daily Double, Naadja and Donna Leona, Paid $33.20.

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:06½. Winner, E. Miller's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HALLIE'S PLAY, $18.60, $9.60, $5.10; DALAMAC, $5.20, $3.60; FLYING LANCE, $3.10.

HALLIE'S PLAY, well up under light restraint in the early stages, bettered her position gradually rounding the lower turn, and slipping through tight quarters on the inside in the final furlong, wore DALAMAC down in the final stride. DALAMAC, prominent and saving ground early, came through on the inside and took a brief lead through the stretch, but Donoso clearly outrode Bateman when it came to a drive. FLYING LANCE, off tardily and outrun early, gained fast in the final furlong and was going strongest of all at the finish. TONIANNA, rated off the early pace, made a bid when straightened into the stretch, but faltered in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—Three furlongs (nursery course). Purse, $2,000 added. For 2-year-old colts and geldings. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:27. Off 3:45½. Winner, B. N. Kane's b. c. †Maemere Farm entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HALCYON BOY, $21.90, $7.10, $4.30; ROMAN, $3.80, $2.90; MAEACE (entry), $3.20.

HALCYON BOY, away alertly, raced straight and in close attendance of the pace in the opening quarter mile, shook off ROMAN through the stretch and won going away. ROMAN, whipped away from the post, assumed a short early lead, but was no match for the winner in the final drive. MAEACE broke a trifle slow, but gained fast through the stretch to wear SUPREME CHANCE down in the last stride. SUPREME CHANCE, off forwardly and in the thick of contention all the way, held on well in the stretch drive. UNICO went close up in the early stages, but faltered through the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Allapattah Handicap. Grade B. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:13. Off 4:17½. Winner, B. F. Whitaker's b. m. (5), by Insco—Spinning Wheel. Trained by J. Howard. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46, 1:11 1-5, 1:17 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEGENDA, $5.10, $3.60, $2.60; KNIGHT GALLANT, $7.70, $3.70; MANSCO, $2.70.

LEGENDA broke alertly, but was outrun in the opening furlong and was taken to the inner rail, where she saved ground rounding the turn, swung to the outside of the leaders coming into the stretch, responded gamely to pressure and drew clear at the end. KNIGHT GALLANT, on the inside, showed excellent speed and raced GAY BALKO into defeat but held on easily for final place when the latter tired in the stretch. The latter, outrun in the first half mile, closed fast when placed to pressure and would have been second in a few more strides. GAY BALKO showed high speed, but retired in the final furlong as if short.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,500. The Golden Beach Handicap. Grade A. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:45. Off 4:46. Winner, Greentree Stables' b. g. (4), by St. Brideaux—Gallant Lass. Trained by J. M. Gaver. Value to winner, $1,100; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:45 4-5, 1:10 4-5, 1:17.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARMOR BEARER, $10.60, $5.70, $2.70; WISE PRINCE, $4.10, $2.40; ROBERT L (entry), $2.20.

ARMOR BEARER, going in his best form, followed the pace closely from the start and responded courageously through the stretch under extreme pressure to outlast WISE PRINCE. The latter, displaying more speed than usual, went in nearest pursuit of the leader throughout, assumed a short lead after straightening out into the stretch, but Meade outfinished Wright when it came to a drive. ROBERT L, outrun in the first half mile, saved ground into the stretch and closed with a rush to wear CREPE down in the last stride. CREPE went into the air at the start, but moved to the front with a rush in the run down the backstretch, set a rapid pace to the furlong pole and then weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:15. Off 5:16½. Winner, Seven Acre Farm's b. h. (6), by Sun Edwin—Fiddle. Trained by E. B. Carpenter. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:13, 1:39 1-5, 1:52.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHINING SUN, $8.30, $4.30, $3.70; VOLO SNOW, $6.10, $4.80; MISTER JACKO, $6.50.

SHINING SUN, whipped to the front to open up a good lead rounding the first turn, maintained his lead gamely the remainder of the trip, but had nothing left at the end. VOLO SNOW, always in nearest pursuit of the leader, held the others safe. MISTER JACKO, vigorously ridden the entire trip, outlasted REMINDING in the final drive. REMINDING finished stoutly. TONI was indifferently ridden and was never a serious factor.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Atlantic. Grade C. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:47. Off 5:49½. Winner, N. Clyman's b. h. (7), by Hechicero—Cantarela. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:12 1-5, 1:38 1-5, 1:50 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CISNEROS, $34.20, $12.20, $6.60; BOB'S BOYS, $4.50, $4.00; POMPEY'S PILLAR, $3.50.

CISNEROS, under alight restraint in the early running, moved up gamely on the outside of the field in the last three furlongs and wore BOB'S BOYS down and won going away. BOB'S BOYS moved into contention swiftly while saving ground rounding the lower turn, shook off CANDLE ENDS at the furlong pole, but could not withstand the winner's bid. POMPEY'S PILLAR, eased off the early pace, gained fast on the outside in the last quarter mile and outlasted REDBREAST. The latter, slipped through on the inside the entire trip, made a bid entering the stretch, but could not get up.

Stagehand Arrives at Scene of $50,000 Widener

Trainer Sande Fails To Make Predictions

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 15.—Earl Sande, once king of the riders and now quite some shakes as a trainer, brought Stagehand to Hialeah Park today for a crack at War Admiral in the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup March 4 and conceded it was a big order.

"You can't beat him, though, if you don't race him," Sande grinned as he supervised the careful process of unloading the horse that topped the Nation in purse winnings with $189,710 last year.

That was as close as he would come to prediction, but it wasn't hard to see Sande thought highly of Stagehand's chances.

"He is a natural router (distance horse)," Sande said. "He is sound and I see no reason why he shouldn't be as good in the handicap division as he was as a 3-year-old."

Sande paused briefly to shake hands with George Conway, War Admiral's trainer, and then jogged to catch up with Stagehand as a groom led him through the shade of Hialeah's Australian pines to the Col. E. R. Bradley barns. The jaunty little man never let Stagehand out of his sight until he was in the stable.

"He can carry weight all right," he resumed. "He carried 124 pounds in the $10,000 Governor's Handicap at Narragansett, his last start, and won without any trouble."

Wheat Prices Steady in Dull Trading

However Chicago Prices Higher Than Other World Markets

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—With wheat trade still in doldrums, prices clung to their narrow groove today in a quiet, barely steady market.

Selling, which caused net overnight losses of about ¼-cent at times was based largely on declines abroad. An international grain house was believed to be the source of some of these orders which pit dealers attributed either to spreading against purchases on foreign markets or to hedging. The Chicago price is higher than in any other major world market.

Wheat closed ¼ lower to ⅛ higher, compared with yesterday, May, 67⅞ to 68; July, 68 to 68⅛; corn ⅛ off to ¼ up; May, 48½ to 48⅝; July 49⅞ to 50; Oats, ⅛ to ¼ higher; Rye, ⅛ off to ⅛ up; lard, unchanged to 5 higher.

Col. Ayres Says Business Gains To Continue

Cleveland Trust Co. Vice President Cites Hopeful Signs

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 15.—Col. Leonard P. Ayres said in his monthly business bulletin today "it seems reasonable to believe that business gains so far attained are likely to be pretty well held, and that new advances may well be expected."

"The preliminary figures for January business include several encouraging items," said the statistician, who is vice president of Cleveland Trust Co. "National income has declined very slightly from December levels, and farm cash income has advanced.

"There has been only a small decrease in factory employment, and little decline in factory pay rolls. The volume of department store sales has held up well, and there has been a small decrease in the cost of living. Security prices, which fell rather sharply when uneasiness about the European situation was at its height, have since staged a strong recovery.

"The flow of Federal expenditures has been contributing to consumer purchasing power not far from a quarter of a billion dollars a month during the past half year, and they may reach their maximum next summer."

Advertising Lineage 1.5% Below Year Ago

Chicago, Feb. 15.—During the week ended February 4, newspapers in 79 major cities carried a total of 16,317,753 lines of retail display advertising, according to Advertising Age, national advertising newspaper.

This total was slightly below the figure for the corresponding week of 1938, when 16,566,890 lines were carried, the loss being approximately 1.5 per cent.

C. & O. Accused Of Faking Data In Rail Deal

Senate Group Flays Officials, Bankers, N. Y. Brokers

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Railroad Finance Committee reported yesterday that acquisition of a controlling interest in the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railway Co. by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. in 1930 involved "fantartic" efforts to evade the law and flout the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The committee told the Senate that "a dummy contract was signed, a leading banker was used as a facade behind which the controlling interests were hidden, a leading firm of New York Stock Exchange brokers appeared as a dummy purchaser."

The report, one of a series by the special sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, said also:

"The books of account of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. and one of its subordinate corporations were so kept as to give an utterly false picture of the transaction.

"False Reports" Cited

"False reports were submitted to the Government. A corporation was found to act as dummy substitute purchaser. Fake documents, including a promissory note which was not a promissory note, a purchase contract which was not a purchase contract, a dummy depository contract and fake extending contracts were drafted by leading financial and railroad lawyers and solemnly signed.

"The elaborate paraphernalia of high finance were repeatedly called into service to present an appearance contrary to the truth."

The committee said the following had 'participated in one or more of the steps in this complicated descent into financial concealment and evasion:"

"One of the biggest railroad holding companies and some of its chief executives; one of the biggest and richest railroad corporations and some of its chief executives; the biggest trust company in the United States and its chief executive; one of the most important member firms of the New York Stock Exchange; the principal private banking firm in the United States; two of the chief law firms operating in the field of railroad and holding company finance."

Accused Not Identified

The committee did not specifically identify the persons and firms referred to in this summary.

It discussed the Van Sweringen system control of the C. & O., Herbert Fitzpatrick, former vice president in charge of legal relations for C. & O., Paine, Webber & Co., brokerage firm, the Cleveland law firm of Tolles, Hogsett & Ginn, J. P. Morgan & Co., and Guaranty Trust Co. of New York in connection with the transaction.

The report said the C. & O. used "indirect" methods to acquire control of the C. & E. I. because it feared ICC disapproval of the transaction if it had asked for permission to execute it directly.

SEC Investigation of Callahan Zinc-Lead Company Leads to Volume in This Stock; U. S. Bonds Rise

New York, Feb. 15.—The anesthetized stock market dragged along its weary way today with a volume of less than half a million shares. The total would have been even smaller had not the S. E. C., about an hour before the close, announced that it is looking into the market for Callahan Zinc-Lead Co., with a view of determining whether the common should be suspended or withdrawn from the big board's list.

This information might not have been classed as startling on an ordinary day but today was an exception and it produced the effect of a sneeze well planted in the center of a microphone. It reverberated everywhere and brought trading in Callahan that accounted for about 9 per cent of the day's share in volume.

Measured in dollars, the turnover of 41,800 shares in this issue is not impressive but its transaction monopolized the tape in the final hour. The price range was from 2 down to ⅝, a new low for the year and the close of ⅞ meant a net loss for the day of 1¼, or a cut of more than a half in the market value.

Aviation Shares Up

The general market edged higher by an average of .15 point. Motors, rails and oils barely held their own while there was fair support for steels, metals and the aviations. The latter reflected the morning announcement of additional French purchases of 500 military planes from American factories and after the close of the market the race for preparedness was moved along another step by the passage in the House of Representatives of the national defense bill, by an overwhelming majority. The House also rejected a proposal to restrict plane purchases.

Except for the special performance in Callahan Zinc, the tape was largely taken over by the aviation issues and the next four most active issues were members of this group. Glenn Martin was the most active and closed unchanged while United Aircraft added 1½ and fractional gains were made by North American and Bendix.

Plane Sales Talk

The vote in the House doubtless is an accurate reflection of opinion throughout the country. In view of the trouble continually brewing abroad, it is regarded as necessary to look to our own defenses. And there is little opposition to the sale of planes to friendly powers abroad but the bungling manner in which the matter has been handled in Washington, and the peculiar secrecy with which the President has surrounded his conferences with the Senate Military Committee is regarded in the financial district as having needlessly increased the amount of international tension.

Armament Boom Seen

The armament branch of industry appears to be assured of a boom no matter what may happen to other more productive lines. Executives of the latter hope that serious attention will be given to an appeal written especially for Secretary of Commerce Hopkins and Secretary of Labor Perkins in which the Government is urged to remove whatever barriers stand in the path of business expansion. Contained in this resolution were such obvious statements as "fear, a lack of confidence and distrust in governmental, social and economic procedure should be removed," and "a political and economic state of mind should be crated which would enable all financiers and the owners and managements of industry to face the future with confidence," and "whatever stands in the way—whatever barriers may have been created, either as a result of fear or as a result of affirmative action on the part of those who administer the affairs of Government—ought to be broken down so that our industrial processes may function in a proper way and unemployment may be thus overcome."

No doubt the casual reader would conclude that such obvious platitudes must have been drawn up by the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Liberty League or some group of economic royalists. But strange as it may seem, the above had nothing to do with Wall Street or the money changers. It was placed before the Roosevelt Administration by leaders of the American Federation of Labor.

These are strange days when labor leaders have to appeal to government to relax its strange hold on business so that there may be jobs again. One would think that those who want the golden eggs would long since have become more solicitous as to the health of the goose.

Bond Trading Dull

Save for a few special groups, listed bonds were idle today. Best rated investment obligations reflected the extraordinary accumulation of idle capital, some of which finds occasional use in the listed market. Among speculative issues transit bonds were favorites, while some industrial convertibles also improved. Foreign dollar issues were neglected. Turnover was only $4,630,000.

Long-term Treasury bonds showed gains of 1-32 to 6-32 point on reports from Washington that the "Treasury may restrict March financing to refunding of June notes," and thus defer raising of new money. These small advances sufficed to produce fresh highs in seven intermediate and long-term issues. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations also were firm, although it surmised that more guaranteed issues will appear soon. Highest rated corporate bonds merely held to former levels.

Preliminary reports from 92 Class I railroads, representing 82.8 per cent of total operating revenues, made public yesterday by the Association of American Railroads, show that those railroads, in January, had estimated operating revenues amounting to $250,608,497, compared with $231,346,269 in the same month of 1938 and $276,137,442 in the same month of 1937. Operating revenues were 8.3 per cent above January, 1938, and 9.2 per cent below January, 1937.

Freight revenues of the 92 Class I railroads in January, 1939, amounted to $201,455,446 compared with $179,877,942 in January, 1938, and $222,959,793 in January, 1937. Freight revenues in January, 1939, were 12.0 per cent above the same month of 1938, but 9.6 per cent below the same month in 1937.

Passenger revenues in January, 1939, according to these preliminary reports from 92 Class I railroads, totaled $29,237,117, compared with $31,520,938 in January, 1938, and $31,311,619 in January, 1937. For the month of January, 1939, they were 7.3 per cent below the same month in 1938, and 6.6 per cent below the same month in 1937.

Steel Activity Advances to 55% Capacity

Volume Increase Looked for During February and March

New York, Feb. 15.—A rise of 1 point in the steel ingot production rate to 55 per cent of capacity and a strengthening of scrap prices are the most concrete evidences of the gradual improvement taking place in the steel industry, says Iron Age today in its weekly survey of the industry.

"January started out rather poorly in sales, but progress was made throughout the month. However, February sales thus far have not gained in the aggregate over those of late January. Retardation of the normal processes of seasonal recovery has not changed the expectation of the steel trade that business volume will expand, but the time has been postponed. Now it is believed that March will bring a larger improvement than has been visible thus far in the new year.

"An acceleration of automobile assemblies as the time for spring car deliveries approaches is a major expectation. A mild improvement in can manufacturing schedules has brought tin plate production up to 52 per cent, with further and more rapid gains possibly in store for next month and subsequent months prior to the food packing season. Railroad buying continues to be a promising prospect.

Railroad Buying

"The Missouri Pacific Lines have issued inquiries for 1,175 freight cars and seven diesel engines; the Maine Central is in the market for 750 freight cars; the Santa Fe may buy 30 diesel-electric locomotives and repair 500 refrigerator cars, and the Union Pacific will build 2,000 freight cars and take bids from car builders on 300 flat cars. Rail orders are small this week, only 2,000 tons for the Western Maryland and 1,000 tons for the St. Louis Southwestern having been placed. The Southern Pacific ordered 12,440 tons of accessories.

"Operations of steel plants show some fluctuations from week to week, but this week there are more gains than losses Mill prices on steel products are steady and firm, while secondary markets are showing improvement. Efforts are being made in some jobbing centers to stiffen prices of products that have been weak, notably merchant pipe, galvanized flat sheets and formed roofing and wire nails.

"There is still no indication as to whether mills will attempt to advance any prices for the second quarter. It seems reasonably certain that there will be no general rise in prices, but small increases on some products on which there are losses, or at best negligible profits, would not be surprising."

Cotton Futures Dip 2 to 9 Points

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—The cotton market returned to its narrow groove today but at a come-down from Tuesday, and final prices were 2 to 9 points lower.

Handicapped from the start by foreign liquidation in near months and scattered local selling in the new-crop positions, there was little opportunity for rallies on the limited support, which came mostly from trade sources.

Cottonseed oil futures overcame a morning dip on overnight selling orders which piled up following Tuesday's sharp rally. The close was unchanged to 4 points net higher today. Firmness of lard attracted support, but the day's top marks were pared by profit taking. Sales totaled 303 contracts. March closed 6.64; May, 6.86; July, 6.94; September, †7.01. Crude oil sold at 5¾ cents in the Southeast, while the Valley quoted 5½@5¾ and Texas, 5¾ nominal.

Ford of Denmark Votes 15% Dividend

Copenhagen, Feb. 15 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. of Denmark announced today it had decided to recommend distribution of a 15 per cent dividend—12 per cent plus a 3 per cent bonus. In 1938 a dividend of 20 per cent plus 15 per cent bonus was paid.

Shares of the company fell 8¾ per cent to 103½ kroner on the stock exchange after the announcement The turnover, however, was small.

Republic Steel Closes One Buffalo Furnace

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 15 (AP).—The Republic Steel Corporation closed one of its four operating open hearth furnaces for repairs today, bringing the Buffalo area steel production rate to 35 per cent of capacity, lowest since July 14, 1938.

Republic officials said they would continue to operate three open hearths. Bethlehem Steel Co is operating ten and Wickwire Spencer Steel Co., two.

Maryland U. Wins, 48-20, Over St. John

Rea Leading Scorer as Annapolis Club Puts Up Game Early Fight

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 15.—Finally winning against St. John's by the very substantial score of 48 to 20, Maryland, with three substitutes in its starting line-up, was well into the first half before it could shake off the tight, but hard fighting Johnnies.

Mondorff, DeWitt and Johnson took the place of Ochenreider, Shaffer and Beamer, who formed the advanced line at the start, as the second half, and soon had the Terrapins coasting along to an easy victory.

The Johnnies shot at the basket whenever opportunity presented itself and in the early stages had much success. Against the regulars, they could accomplish little, as the speed, alertness and strength of the veteran Maryland players kept them from getting set for their shots.

Not only were the regulars who came into the game at the start of the second half, faster and better shots than the starters, but Bill Rea came to life at the guard position and scored again and again on fast dashes down the court to take a pass or nab a rebound, his total of 18 points, 15 scored in the second half, being far above that of any other player.

However, we sell tickets, it isn't difficult, of course, because there are a lot of people who want to go to a dinner for Babe Ruth, especially if all those other persons of prominence are going to be there. And they take it for granted that they are going to be there because they are among the sponsors. Besides there is another list to whom we are sure to sell tickets, even if they can't or don't want to attend.

Ed Barrow will take a table for eight because he was instrumental in getting the Babe to New York, where he made his greatest reputation. And naturally we can sell Horace Stoneham a table for eight. Otherwise he might appear to be envious of the Yankees and the fame that Babe Ruth brought them.

Anyway we dispose of, perhaps, 1,500 tickets at $7.50 each. And we serve a dinner that costs $2.00 a plate. And we have speeches, which cost us nothing, because some people actually will pay for the privilege of talking in public and others are in positions where they can't refuse.

Finally we bring the guest of honor into the spotlight and in token of our love and affection, our esteem, loyalty and gratitude we present him with—what do you think?—a wrist watch! Or maybe a traveling bag. Or perhaps a set of silver.

Anyway it doesn't cost us more than $100. If we've been especially successful with selling those tickets and have a very good turnout, we might go as high as $250. But this still leaves us a clear profit of $8,000, which isn't bad for a few weeks' work. A lot of people work harder for a year and don't make half that much.

9,000 Saliva Tests On Horses Brought Only 6 Positives

By the United Press.

Federal Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger has informed Congress his agency has "really whipped" the problem of race horse doping.

He told a House Appropriations sub-committee that there were 9,000 saliva tests on thoroughbreds last year and that only six proved positive, which shows "that the problem has really been whipped."

"We have had few cases this year compared with what we had five years ago," he said. "I would say that for every 100 cases five years ago, we have less than one today. This is due to the fact that our campaign has resulted in the racing commissioners of all States taking saliva tests of the winners and suspicious horses."

Eastern Five Swamps Little Hoyas, 42-22

Eastern High's basketball team had no trouble swamping the basketers of Georgetown Prep yesterday on the Lincoln Park floor, 42-22, with 12 players being used by Coach John McBride, of Eastern.

The Preppers were held to 3 points in the first quarter, 5 in the second, as Eastern's first string ran up 26 points. The second half was featured by the use of nearly every Tide substitute, while the Little Hoyas vainly tried to keep up.

Bob Custer, high scorer for Western last year, found his eye for the first time since his transfer to Eastern, and hung up 13 points for scoring honors. Lou Wimsatt, Georgetown Prep pivoter, was high for his team with 8 points.

Central Loses To G. W. Frosh

Led by Charley Jones, elongated Evansville, Ind., forward who scored 10 points, George Washington University Freshmen defeated the Central High five, 32-27, yesterday at G. W. gym.

The Colonial yearlings got off to an early start and never were headed, leading 17-10 at the half and holding most of their margin throughout the second half. Harry Martin and Len Sokol shared scoring honors for the losers, each tallying 8 points.

winning effort netted him free entry in the Olive event.

Another preliminary will be held at Queen Pin tonight, starting at 10 o'clock, first prize for which is another free entry in the Olive sweeps.

The latest two entries for the tournament Saturday are B. W. Humphries, of the C & P Telephone League, and M. Ulrich, of the Arcadia Bankers' League.

Petworth League

Of the ten teams that went into action in the league, none was able to account for better than an odd-game victory. Even Soller's Plumbers, the leaders, were content with a 2-game triumph over York Haberdashers, Reed's 350 being high.

Letter Carriers

C. Sewell rolled the high individual game of the night, 149, and the U street team turned in high game, 600, and high set, 1,661.

U. S. Engineers League

The Generals captured high team game and high team set, 534 and 1,504, respectively.

Bureau of Standards

Roy Bowker's 145 was the highest game of the evening and his 370 took set honors. Technologists took team game and set, 608 and 1,707.

Western Electric

M. Donley and the Chestnut five took all honors, Donley individual game and set, 134 and 344, and Chestnut team game and set, 511 and 1,504.

C. and P. League

Accounting, in first place in the league, had its advantage pared down somewhat when Northern District No. 2 swept three games. Ed Ballard rolled a 400 set to lead in the victory.

Eastern Star League: Ladies

Bethany lost a three-game to the league leaders, Washington Centenial. The Millands went into second place with three games over Lebanon.

Commissioner and Misc League

Technical Staff, league leader, and Miscellaneous swept matches with Collections No. 1 and Stenographic, respectively.

Lucky Strike—Ladies

The Saazets took two games from Commerce, and registered the high team game of the evening, 515.

General Motors League

Furman Cones, of the leading Emerson and Orme five, rolled 121 game and 328 set to lead his team to an odd game decision over Wolfe Motors.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A certain John and Mary Doe, considered to be average bridge players, have played this hand three different times at five-year intervals, the cards being altered sufficiently to disguise the deal but not to destroy the problem. Each time Coffin arranged that a strong, defensive team played against them.

Today's Hand

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 3 ♡

All three years, the pair bid three no trump: the first and third years the contract was made, the second it was set two tricks, but the playing technique was vastly different in each case. Here are Coffin's notes on the subject:

"1929—West led the three of hearts and John Doe, declarer, put up one of dummy's honors. East covered with the king and the ace in the South hand won. Declarer had no difficulty in establishing the clubs, and he made his contract, winning four clubs, two hearts, two diamonds and a spade.

"1934—West again led the heart three (actually its equivalent), and John Doe, again declarer, played an honor from dummy, but East was canny. He refused to cover with the king which would establish an entry for the clubs and the queen or jack held the first trick. Declarer tried to drive out the club ace, but West co-operated in the defense and held up his ace till the third round. Doe's attempts to establish the club suit were foiled. He was set two, winning two hearts, two clubs, two diamonds and a spade.

"1939—The same opening lead was made, but Doe, more alert this time, realized he would need the queen or jack of hearts for an entry, and so he played dummy's five to the first trick. East had developed his defensive technique in the ensuing years, also. He reasoned that if he put up the nine of hearts, third hand, he would force declarer's ace, and thereby assist in establishing an entry to dummy. Therefore, he nonchalantly tossed on his heart deuce, hoping Doe's thrifty instincts would gain the upper hand and he would let the five hold. But Doe was not to be misled by this Grecian gift."

He overtook the five with the ace, and thereafter had no difficulty in winning his contract, driving out the club ace and entering dummy with one of the heart honors after East captured the king. He made three no trump, taking two hearts, four clubs, two diamonds and a spade.

Had he let the five of hearts in dummy hold, he would not have been able to enter the dummy after the ace of clubs was driven out.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

FCC Chairman McNinch has gone to Atlantic City for a week of rest. A spokesman down there says there is no news going on in the FCC, which, in the light of the past, is news of itself . . . A physician sent Civil Service President Mitchell home from his desk yesterday. A touch of the 'flu.

THIS column receives a letter from a jiu jitsu enthusiast—who, incidentally, is a former student of Prof. Leo Batten—suggesting that the many jiu jitsu students in town hold a tournament to pick the best devotees of the art. The idea throws us for a loop, and we should like to see it advanced. We have had considerable occasion to watch Prof. Batten's classes and would predict that his students will give a good show. He taught Interior people and the NPS guards, of whom he is one. His classes have embraced men and women. One of the latter weighed but 107 pounds but was graduated able to deal with twice that weight on the mat or in the street. Any of Batten's students can disarm an assailant in the fleeting of an eye; they can, indeed, take on two assailants without risk. Has anyone any ideas about the holding of such a tournament?

ANOTHER letter: "A Bostonian who hasn't been in the Capital city very long would like to know where he can find a restaurant that serves good food, well prepared, at a price within the reason of a $1,260 clerk. If it is possible to answer this very important question (at least to me) I should appreciate it very much." Unhappily that question isn't for this place to answer. But it can be commented that if that $1,500 minimum salary ever is granted by Congress, such letters won't have to be written.

FEDERAL chauffeurs drive to an issue—the eight-hour day. Particularly so in the Veterans' Administration, where they have pointed out that chauffeurs cannot sleep on call. Every hour on call is an hour on duty, say the chauffeurs, who ask that provision be made for them in the 1939-40 budget. The V. A. has indicated that something will be done—if the $1,000,000 allowed for establishment of the eight-hour day proves sufficient.

JOBS: mineral economist and senior, associate and assistant mineral economists (any specialized branch), $2,600 to $4,600, General Land Office, Interior . . . senior consultant in home economics education, $4,600, Office of Education . . . fisheries marketing agent, $2,300; assistant, $1,800, Bureau of Fisheries . . . naval architect and associate and assistant naval architects, $2,600 to $3,800 . . . physiotherapy aide, $1,800; physiotherapy pupil aide, $1,440, Public Health Service and Veterans' Administration. C. S. jobs.

GOINGS-ON: The Wisconsin Society dances tonight at the Carlton Hotel; also a reception for their Congressional delegation . . . The Mississippi State Society dances tonight in the Continental Ballroom, Wardman Park Hotel . . . St. Elizabeths Hospital Lodge, No. 28, A. F. G. E., flings an oyster feast and beer party, from 6 p. m. to 1 a. m. today at the Fort Carroll Tavern.

A CEREMONY, in the name of science, will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow when the Office of Indian Affairs places a number of Navajo rugs on the Interior Department cafeteria floor. These rugs will contain a variety of wool and will be of varying manufacture. The idea is to let Interior employes walk on the rugs over a period of time. Through this process it can be determined what wool wears the best and what process of manufacture is the most satisfactory. The rugs will be placed in the busiest aisle of the cafeteria and kept there until something is learned.

LOST Motion, or Lesson in Journalism No. 1: On February 10 the NPS sent out a press release saying that 50 chief clerks would convene here on February 15 to discuss matters relating to personnel, fiscal matters, etc. This was interesting because personnel is the hot topic of the day. On the 15th the NPS says that the sessions are closed, star chamber. Now the problem is why did they tell the public the chief clerks would be here if what the chief clerks do can't, officially at least, be made known? The public isn't interested in the fact of the meeting. It would like only to know what is being done, and it would like to know officially, and not the version some chief clerk would give sub rosa behind one of the decorative bushes over there.

Bob Burns Says—

If you happen to have heard some extra special piece of red hot gossip lately, I'll bet you my Aunt Trude started it! What a dame! If they had a Nation-wide gossipin' contest, she'd win by an earful of nice, juicy rumors an' three good, lusty tongue wags? The woman never runs down. You jes' commence to think she's givin' out when someone comes along with a choice little tidbit like: "Did you see who Squire Elder's wife was with last night?" an' Aunt Trude's goin' full blast again!

I used to figger she might slow up as she growed older, but I don't see no symptoms yet. In fact, that last time I was back home, I hadn't got both feet off the train before she came limpin' up an' said: "Bob, I sprained my ankle but I jes' had to get down to tell you that your old maltese cat has kittens an' we don't know who the father is yet!" They say bad news travels fast, but, boy—Aunt Trude travels faster! I got kinder peeved at her one day an' I up an' told her: "Aunt Trude, do you know what you are? You're the gallopin', gossipin' las' word lass of Arkansaw!" But do you think that shamed her any? She throwed her arms around me an' said: "Now, Robin—ain't you sweet—payin' me sich a high an' lofty compliment!"

Time 'Averaging' Seen Feasible by Wage-Hour Head

Baltimore, Feb. 15 (AP).—A possibility that an employe who lost time because of illness might be able to make it up later in overtime work was seen today by Elmer F. Andrews, Federal wage-hour administrator.

Andrews spoke before the Baltimore Association of Commerce and then answered questions which had been written in advance. Commenting on a question about making up time, he said:

"Under the present law, averaging is not possible. It seems reasonable and it might be possible in the future".

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Once More on His Own

Spunky the Arctic Fox was a devoted follower of Snow King the Polar Bear. For many miles he had tagged along behind the big Bear, but always at a respectful and safe distance. Back and forth over the great ice floes they had traveled, the great white ruler of the Far North and his small white follower. It was not affection for Snow King that prompted this devotion. It was not admiration. Nothing of the kind. It was simply the reasoning of the little white cousin of Reddy Fox that the leftovers form the meals of so mightly a hunter should be sufficient to keep so small a person as himself from going too humgry, and in this he had so far been right.

Spunky would chuckle to himself as he watched the great Bear stalking a seal and preparing to make a kill. "He thinks he is doing that all for himself, but he isn't," Spunky would say to himself. "No, sir, he isn't. He is doing it for me too, for when he is through eating there is sure to be enough left for me."

Then he would sit down and watch, taking care to do nothing to spoil the hunt and licking his lips in anticipation. That handsome little white Fox was for the first time being a parasite. You know a parasite is one who lives on some one else instead of being independent. It was easier to have Snow King do the hunting for him than to do it himself. To Spunky it was a very satisfactory arrangement, and apparently the great Bear didn't mind. You see it didn't interfere with him at all.

Now it would seem that way out there on the ice far from land would be the worst place in all the Great World to hunt for food. Not so. Long ago Snow King discovered that in an Arctic winter when the land is buried in snow and ice there are few folk in fur or feathers remaining there and these are hard to catch, but that in the sea along the edges of the great ice pans are fish and the Seal and Walrus folk, and once in a very great while the frozen body of a Whale caught in the drifting ice. So the ice fields are the chosen hunting grounds of Snow King the Polar Bear. When hunting is poor on one mass of floating ice he does not hesitate to swim to another, for the water is warmer than the air and his coat is waterproof. He loves the water.

So it came about that one day as Spunky trailed Snow King at his usual respectful distance Snow King stopped at the edge of the ice and for some time stood swinging his head from side to side as he looked across a wide stretch of open water to another great ice pan. Presently he slipped into the water and swam straight out toward that other ice. Spunky was dismayed. He raced to the edge of the ice and there ran back and forth barking querulously. He couldn't follow. That water was too cold for him, for his coat wasn't waterproof. He ran far along the edge of the ice hoping to find somewhere he could get across to that other ice. It was a vain hope. He saw Snow King climb out on the other ice, shake himself, and move away without so much as a glance behind. Spunky sat down, lifted his black nose and yelped. He was watching his meal ticket disappear and there was nothing he could do about it.

Having accepted the fact that he would no longer have his food provide for him, Spunky wasted no time in vain regrets. He was once more on his own and he knew it. If he would live he must eat and there was no longer anyone to provide his food for him. He must get it himself. Out there on the frozen sea might be a good place for a Bear to get his living, but it was not so good for a Fox on his own. He thought of home. These ice fields were not home. Home was on land where he had started from to follow Snow King. It was under snow and ice, but the land was there just the same. He remembered certain stores of meat that he had hidden away there. He headed straight for home many miles away.

"BOTTLED POWER!"

It takes a formula that's got Punch-Power to bring quick relief from the aches and pains of simple neuralgia, sore muscles, stiffness due to fatigue and exposure. That's EN-AR-CO, the antiseptic counter-irritant. EN-AR-CO is Bottled Power—you'll say so after the very first application. All Druggists.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

A. Conti Berenguer presents Wagner's "Lohengrin" in Constitution Hall Wednesday night. The cast:

Lohengrin ..... Frederic Jagel
Elsa of Brabant .... Emma Redell
Ortrud ..... Elisabeth Wysor
Telramund ..... Francis Row
Henry the Fowler..Francis Barnard
King's Herald
William Fletcher Smith
Conductor: Maurice de Abravanel.

In view of the musical satisfaction derived from last evening's performance of "Lohengrin," one is inclined to deal leniently with the difficulties of production which delayed the curtain until nearly 9 o'clock, and prolonged the second act to the discomfiture of the critic obliged to catch an edition with his review. One is also disposed to overlook the scenic makeshifts, inevitable in Constitution Hall, which produced some curious backgrounds and lessened the dignity of Elsa's song to the breeze. Such incongruities will be inevitable until such time as Washington has an opera house adequately equipped and capable of holding large audiences.

One's first word of commendation goes to Maurice de Abravanel for evoking from an orchestra insufficiently instrumented for the full values of the Wagnerian score a remarkably satisfactory web of tonal color. Without his experienced hand at the loom, there is no telling in what tattered condition the music might have emerged.

Emma Redell's vocal excellence in the title role was not only an artistic pleasure but also a gratification to the audience in the accomplishment of a Washingtonian. The pure clarity of her soprano voice was continually evidenced in both its lyric and its dramatic passages. The even flow of tone in long phrases showed an admirable control of breath and a plastic freedom in production. It is a voice equally assured in delicacy of shading and in resonant fullness.

Frederic Jagel in the title role disclosed the type of tenor voice traditionally and aptly called heroic. it has the requisite quality for sonorous declamation together with a dulcet strain for lyric gentleness. Elisabeth Wysor as the sinister Ortrud had a tonal power befitting the part, and Francis Row embodied Telramund both vocally and physically. Francis Barnard had the ungrateful role of Henry the Fowler, and William Fletcher Smith declaimed the orders of the king's herald.

Rites Tomorrow For Lee Moxley

Lee Moxley, 60, of 2418 Fourth street northeast, chief painter of the Department of Agriculture's interior group for 25 years, will be buried tomorrow at 10 a. m., following requiem mass in St. Martin's Church. He died Tuesday morning after a month's illness.

A member of the Holy Name Society of St. Martin's and a former member of the St. Stephen's Minstrels, Moxley is survived by his wife, Mary C. Moxley; a daughter, Louise, and his sister, Mrs. Eva Fagin, all of this city. Following the services he will be buried at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Formfit Week

JUST 3 MORE DAYS!

Miss Mary Killoran

In the Hecht Co. Corset Shop

well-known figure authority, to tell you about Schiaparelli's four essential points for the 1939 figure.

THIS year the silhouette is all-important. To wear your spring clothes to advantage, your figure must conform to the designers' ideal. Realizing this, Formfit foundation designers went straight to Schiaparelli to determine what your new figure must be. Miss Killoran, a specialist in figure problems and how they can be solved by properly designed, correctly fitting foundations, can explain the basic points to you.

Meet her in our Corset Shop, have a heart-to-heart talk with her, let her analyze your figure and advise you. She'll be here every day this week, to help Washington women achieve glamorous figures.
